FORMER DETECTIVE WILL TESTIFY ESTIMATE 125 DEAD

WITNESS RETURNED AFTER ENLISTMENT WITH MARINE CORPS

Burns Himself Will Be
Questioned In Jury
Scandal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Snatched back from "The Halls of Montezuma," as the service song goes, a former official of the Burns Detective Agency, wearing the uniform of a private in the United States Marine Corps, was brought to Washington today to give all-important testimony to the grand jury that is probing Harry F. Sinclair's alleged efforts to tamper with the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy jury.

Also appearing today before the grand jury will be William J. Burns himself.

From the two men, Assistant District Attorney Burkinshaw hopes to ascertain who paid the salaries and expenses of the sixteen private detectives who kept a constant surveillance over eleven of the twelve jurors that sat in judgment of Sinclair and former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall.

The marine who will be heard is Douglas S. Catchim, former assistant manager of the local Burns office. He had been told, according to information in the hands of the district attorney's office, that he "would be fixed for life" if he got out of the country and failed to be available for questioning by the grand jury. He enlisted in the marine corps, apparently in the hope of sailing for Haiti on November 1, but his plane went amiss and he was nabbed by secret service agents. It is thought he has invaluable records in his possession. An armed guard escorted him back to Washington from the naval base at Newport News, Va.

Burns was in town awaiting the call of Burkinshaw. He will be questioned about the "flying squad" of agents he sent to Washington to observe the doings of the Fall-Sinclair jury. His son, W. Sherman Burns, was due to have appeared also today, but was kept in New York by illness. It was W. Sherman to whom Charles Ruddy, boss of the Washington crew, personally reported. Burkinshaw has sworn out a complaint against Sinclair and one of his lieutenants, H. Mason Day, vice president of the Sinclair Exploration Company, charging them with conspiracy to attempt to illegally influence the petit jury in the Fall-Sinclair trial. Day is out on $25,000 bond and the arrest warrant is being held in abeyance on Sinclair. Today, the young assistant district attorney hopes to ascertain who actually negotiated with Burns for the employment of his agents.

Also waiting to be heard today by the grand jury were three of the Fall-Sinclair jurors. Burkinshaw has questioned all of them and has learned that most of them felt they were under surveillance. One, in particular has stated that, becoming aware of this, he received an anonymous phone call telling him the shadow was "a department of justice agent" and to "watch your step." Burkinshaw declares that no justice agents have ever figured in the case and he is bringing such facts before the grand jury in an effort to show them that the defense was attempting to intimidate the jury by making them feel the government was keeping close watch on them.

TREASURY ISSUES NEW BOND ISSUE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Authorization of a new treasury bond issue of $400,000,000 in seven months, 3-1/8 per cent certificates of indebtedness, was announced today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

The issue dates from Nov. 15 and will be used in the retirement of second Liberty bonds. While the outstanding liberties amount to over $700,000,000, it was believed that not to exceed $400,000,000 would be presented for exchange on Nov. 15. Another treasury financing will take place December 15. Interest on the second Liberty issue ceases November 15.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—With the fight over the Marshall bill attracting the major interest of Ohio voters, finishing touches were being given throughout the state today to the statewide and local campaigns which terminate at the polls Tuesday.

Politicians here today predicted that unless an expected heavy dry vote is cast in the rural districts in supporting of the measure, the Marshall bill will be defeated by an overwhelming adverse vote in the cities and other urban areas. Predictions were made by these politicians that, if the rural vote is light, the Marshall bill will be defeated by a majority ranging from 25,000 to more than 100,000.

DRIVEN TO HOUSE TOPS BY FLOODS

Contents Completely Destroyed—Estimate Loss At $15,000

Smoke curling up from the ruins of their beautiful farm home was the sight that greeted Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Faulkner, who live one-half mile off the Valley Pike, seven miles southeast of Xenia, and their daughter, Mrs. Laverne Fulton, Massillon, when they returned from visiting relatives early Sunday evening.

The modern farm residence, with its contents, including all furnishing goods, personal apparel and other property, was destroyed with a loss estimated at $15,000. About half of the damage is covered by insurance. A refrigerator and a kitchen table, constituted all of the property saved from the ruins.

Cause of the conflagration is unknown, although it is believed to have started in the basement. The furnace fire had not been replenished since 8 o'clock in the morning and Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner and Mrs. Fulton left home at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. They spent two hours at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hartsook, Valley Pike, and noticed the smoke from the fire when they started home.

In the meantime Charles Bone, Port William, who was visiting in the neighborhood, discovered the flames and neighboring farmers formed a volunteer crew of firemen. With the aid of an engine from Port William and using chemical and a large water tank, the volunteers mounted outbuildings and a big straw stack between the house and barn, and saved the stack and all the other buildings.

The house was of two story frame and stucco construction, about four or five years old, and entirely modern. It is believed that the house held the flames and smoke until the interior was practically consumed so that by the time the flames were noticeable to neighbors, the interior was completely gutted. Only the foundation remained standing after the blaze.

The loss included everything members of the family did not have with them at the time. Howard Faulkner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner, who was in Xenia at the time, owned $1,000 worth of property which was destroyed in the house besides his clothing. Mrs. Fulton came for a visit with her parents Saturday, and her husband and two friends who accompanied them, had left for Massillon before the fire. Mrs. Fulton lost all of her wearing apparel, except the clothes she had on, and her loss also included a diamond ring, diamond brooch, her watch and her husband's watch, which he had left to be repaired.

Occupants of the tenant house on the farm were absent at the time. They will remove to another tenant house on the farm and the Faulkner family will occupy the tenant house near the burned dwelling for the present. They expect to rebuild the residence destroyed by fire.

With a dozen different plans already proposed to end future Mississippi River disasters, Rep. Frank R. Reed, (R) of Illinois, chairman of the committee, declared that the ultimate cost may be anywhere from $250,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. Delegates from every section—more than 2,000 in all—poured into the capital on special trains to tell the story of the great flood of last spring and to demand that the nation act.

FERTILIZER MEN MEET AT ATLANTA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Seeking a plan to prevent bumper crops from bumping farmers into bankruptcy, the National Fertilizer Association will convene its annual southern convention in Atlanta tomorrow to draft proposals for control of surplus crops, it was announced here today.

Fertilizer manufacturers and agricultural workers from twenty-five states are expected to attend. The convention also will discuss the federal trade commission's policy toward business.

SENATE INSURGENTS TO FAVOR NORRIS MUSCLE SHOALS PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The senate insurgent bloc will support the new Norris plan for government operation of the Muscle Shoals dam as a power project, while opposing all plans for establishing nitrate plants at the power site, it was learned today.

The new plan of Senator George W. Norris (R) of Nebraska, long a foe of proposals to lease the project privately, will involve sale by the government of all power generated at Muscle Shoals and use of the proceeds to construct nitrate plants in other parts of the country, where cheap fuel can be obtained.

THOUSANDS ATTEND FUNERAL RITES FOR COLORED ACTRESS

New England's disastrous floods have driven folk to the housetops. Here is a Central Press photograph of a flood scene at Bellows Falls, Vt., where a man on the porch roof of Mrs. Mary Buckley's house surveys the expanse of water while awaiting a rescue boat.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Harlem yesterday paid final tribute to its idol, Florence Mills, the 32-year-old singing comedienne, who died last Tuesday after an operation for appendicitis.

With more than 150,000 lining the route, the body of the crooner of "blues," resting in a $10,000 copper casket, led the funeral cortege twenty-six blocks through the heart of Harlem.

Five thousand Negroes jammed into the Mother Zion A. M. E. Church crowding galleries, pews, baptistry, choir loft and all of the aisles except the center, down which ten men brought the heavy casket, blanketed in costly flowers, amid outbursts of sobbing.

For two hours the late comedienne was mourned in addresses by the pastor, Rev. James W. Brown and Rev. Walter King of New Orleans. Telegrams from celebrities here and abroad were interspersed with songs during the long service. Rev. Mr. Brown reviewed the life of Miss Mills from her birth in Washington, D. C., in 1895 to her death, and included a review of her theatrical triumphs. He took for his text: "Earth has no sorrow that heaven cannot cure."

Outside approximately 150,000 Negroes massed themselves before the church where they smoked, stamped and shuffled in the chill autumn air.

One fatality occurred during the funeral rites. Robert Brown, 47, a Negro musician in the band which was in the funeral procession collapsed from a heart attack and died before the arrival of an ambulance.

The services were halted at one point when Juanita Stinnette, broke down while singing "Florence," a song written by her partner, Chapelle, and dedicated to Miss Mills. Arriving at the line—"The hours you spent with us, Florence," the singer swayed and several ushers rushed to her support. She was carried from the church screaming "Florence."

The Carolina choir sang Negro spirituals. Their most significant rendition was "Deep River," by a tall, dark skinned woman singing the alto lead. She sang with eyes tightly shut and hands clasped, setting the entire congregation awash.

En route to the church twelve automobiles loaded with floral pieces estimated to have cost $100,000 led the cortege. Thirty girls, friends of the "black bird" clad in gray from head to foot, and bearing flowers in their hands preceded the hearse.

In the mass of flowers were contributions from representatives of the stage, screen, boxing ring and society. The largest piece, an immense offering in the shape of "Gates Ajar" attested the sympathy of Harry Willis, the former heavyweight champion of his race. "Bleeding Heart" was the offering of the U. S. Thompson, husband of Miss Mills laid upon her bier.

Answering Mellon's argument respecting federal aid in road building, Hudson asserted that the shipping industry is not taxed although the government builds harbors and maintains light houses, and that the farmer is not taxed for the costly campaigns of the department of agriculture.

He charged that the government sold two billion dollars worth of road building machinery acquired during the war to France for $150,000,000. And France, in turn, sold much of it "to some of our states for 100 cents on the dollar."

George M. Graham of Toledo, representing the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, asserted that if the auto industry was selfish it would demand reduction of the corporation income tax rate alone, since the public pays the auto tax.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 7.—After narrowly escaping being pounded to pieces against the breakwater at Fairport Harbor on Lake Erie, just east of Cleveland, the freighter John A. Kling, carrying a crew of twenty-six, was freed from the sandy shallows last night. The coast guard was preparing to rescue the crew when the vessel was re-floated.

Public offering was made in New York today of $50,000,000 five per cent debentures of the International Match Company, which is affiliated with the Swedish Match Company. The bonds received by the Swedish Match Company were turned over to the International Match Company. The $25,000,000 not offered for sale will be held in the company's treasury.

ESTIMATE 125 DEAD AFTER HIGH WATERS IN EASTERN STATES

Snow Adds To Perils Of Stricken New England—
Food Being Rationed To Sufferers—
Relief Work Rushed

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 7.—The mad floods of upper New England have passed—but as they moved southward at last to the sea today, Connecticut, already lashed by advancing freshets, was due to feel the crest of the mighty wall of water which has wreaked such havoc in other New England states.

Behind the waters today is a mounting list of dead, no estimated at 125 and a hundred million dollars in wreckage. Snow has come bringing new peril of the elements to the northern valleys where manpower is being conscripted to rehabilitate the devastated regions and to the hills where other countless thousands, unsheltered seek safety from the raging waters.

Food supplies in Vermont, home state of the president, and were hit of all are running low.

By edict of Governor Weeks and committees appointed to conserve rations until roads have been patched up and new supplies arrive on half a loaf of bread a day is allowed for each person.

A summary of the flood toll in New England shows:

Vermont—More than half the state flood swept, at least 125 dead, 50,000 homeless, with freshets subsiding and work of rebuilding begun.

Massachusetts—Untold millions in property damage, one town completely wiped out, 10,000 homeless as crest of Connecticut River flood passes through Springfield.

Connecticut—Already battered to damage of millions in first onslaughts of freshets, crest of flood rushing down Connecticut River.

New Hampshire—Towns built beneath water landslides and northern part of the state still menaced by freshets.

Rhode Island—Almost back normal as Blackstone and other rivers subside after causing damage.

Maine—Swept by gales as floods, nearly back to normal. All of the western and northern part of New England is still clogged in lines of communication. Railway telegraph and telephone service is barely able to handle the flood situation. Rail damage reaches $25,000,000 and in many instances will not be restored for weeks, while it will never be stored in other districts. At least another $15,000,000 damage has been done to highways.

An air line, with a base at Concord, N. H., has been established to rush sugar, yeast and salt, most urgently needed supplies, to stricken towns.

The first plane made its way to Montpelier, center of the wrecked area yesterday, piloted an army flier. Governor Weeks sent out word to the army base in Vermont believed it can drag itself back to normalcy without side help except for labor.

Barre, Waterbury, Keeton, Rensselaer and other towns on the Vermont River, which runs from Montpelier to Lake Champlain, received the most savagely killed sweep of the torrents.

Barre has twenty-six killed. Waterbury twenty-five, ten seventeen and Richmond while state highway report the Bolton dead at thirty-six. A reported a logging camp bunked with eighteen men swept into freshet.

Many smaller towns and villages have not been heard from.

Army fliers, newspapermen, sightseers flying over the district inundated reported the wreckage and attempting to establish communications. Lieut. C. F. Blythe back to Concord from Montpelier reported that between the deluge and a great lake in extent, had been formed by a stalled in the middle of it. Flooded low he saw scores of men, women and children, lying on the ground. They had been there for sixty hours without food or word and was sent Major General Preston Brown, commanding troops in the district to send relief.

Boston, cut off from its milk supply faces famine. Less than one per cent of its normal consumption has arrived here. Retail dealers were offered high prices for yesterday, but had no milk to offer at any price. The big dealers so far have taken care of a family trade. The Boston & Maine Railroad has given milk to right of way over everything. The first relief train of six cars milk arrived here last night.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—At request of Gov. Weeks of Vermont President Coolidge today authorized the retention of one regiment of regular army troops in the flooded area around Burlington, Vt., will be kept there until the emergency passes.

MOOREHEAD FACING SECOND SHORTAGE

SPRINGFIELD, O., Nov. 7.—Foray Moorehead, former city mayor, was held in jail here today under bond totalling $35,000, on charges of embezzlement.

An examination of Moorehead's books last week revealed a shortage of approximately $5,500 in city funds, according to examination.

He was arrested, pleaded not guilty and released on $10,000 bond.

Saturday, the examiners reported further shortages amounting to $12,731.31 and Moorehead was arrested. His bond on this charge was set at $25,000, which he was unable to furnish.

The case will be presented to next county grand jury.

HOW MRS. WEAVER WAS HELPED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. LAWRENCE WEAVER, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

Located at the Springfield Union Depot, waiting to board a train for Detroit, a sixteen-year-old girl, ward of the O. S. and S. O. Home, who slipped away from the institution Friday night, was returned by Col. T. E. Andrews, superintendent of the Home, to the institution, Saturday.

The girl had stayed Friday night, at a home in Xenia, where her father had boarded when located here, and left Saturday for Springfield, enroute to Detroit, where her mother lives.

BRITISH LORD TO WED COUNTRY GIRL

NOTTINGHAM, Eng., Nov. 7.—The first century of dietetics to which the medical profession of Britain has given its approval has been established in an old world mansion four miles from Nottingham. Here, amid woods, rose gardens, tennis courts and bowling lawns, people who have been worn out by the stress of modern life are rejuvenated by the cells of their bodies rejuvenated by fasting, by fruit and vegetable juice diet, by natural exercise, and by all the natural processes that science has lately discovered to be the chief preventive and cure for disease.

Some scores of wealthy people are already established in the mansion, fasting and dieting, and the list includes several persons well-known in English society. Lady Fisher, wife of Sir Warren Fisher, secretary of the British Treasury, is one of those chiefly interested in the movement. She herself recently fasted for a month.

The length of treatment lasts about four weeks. It begins with four or five days of fasting, during which the patient absorbs nothing but mineral salts and fruit and vegetable juices. This is followed by a diet of solid fruit and vegetables for a longer period. During these two periods certain more or less strenuous exercises are prescribed, as well as hydrotherapy treatment, including mineral baths.

O. H. S. A. A. WILL NOT SANCTION COURT TOURNEY FOR GIRLS

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—Though there are 440 high schools in Ohio having girls' basketball teams there will be no general inter-scholastic basketball tournament for girls this year according to an announcement made by the Ohio High School Athletic Association here.

Miss Lydia Clark, for several years director of Women's athletics at Ohio State University, when asked her opinion on the matter said "I fully agree with the Ohio High School Athletic Association in not sanctioning inter-scholastic basketball for girls in our high schools of the state. Girls' basketball should never be played only under girls' rules, and because these rules are broken so often, competition among different schools in the sport should never be allowed. Properly trained women should coach and referee all basketball games in which girls are playing."

Her opinion is almost identical with the view given by H. A. Townsend, commissioner of the Ohio High School Athletics. Townsend pointed out a ruling made by the Board of Control of the Association when they voted not to sanction independent basketball tournaments.

Two years ago the board recommended that all girls' basketball be played under Girls' standard rules and that as far as possible the coaches for the teams should be women.

Statistics compiled by the association show that the recommendation met with some disfavor. Nearly a third of the high schools in the state are not in favor of playing basketball in accordance with girls' standard.

Some demand a modification of the rules, others that boys' standard rules should be used. Boys' rules, however, were advocated by only nine schools. The records show too, that of the number of schools that have girls' basketball teams listed with the Association 154 of the teams are coached by men. This is undoubtedly due to the lack of properly trained and athletic women "who understand the game," in the smaller rural communities.

The strain that girls undergo when they participate in a general tournament, the atmosphere surrounding such tournaments, and the problems of proper chaperoning are the three great factors that make inter-scholastic basketball tournaments prohibitive for the moral and physical welfare of our girls, Townsend declared.

ANNOUNCING HARRY M. FISHER FOR City Commissioner TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 8

—Political Adv.

A Menace To Public Health TEN REASONS WHY FOR YOUR OWN PROTECTION, AND FOR THE PROTECTION OF PUBLIC HEALTH YOU SHOULD VOTE "NO" ON THE INITIATED CHIROPRACTORS BILL

- 1 All reasonably competent chiropractors can now secure licenses by taking examinations and complying with lawful requirements. (Over 135 have been licensed in the past three years.)
- 2 The Licensed Chiropractors Society of the State of Ohio is opposed to this bill, and is actively working against its passage. The Initiative is promoted by "advertising specialists" and UNLICENSED chiropractors.
- 3 The health of the public is best protected by one licensing board.
- 4 There are many other limited practitioners. If the chiropractors are granted a special board, the others are equally entitled to them. With such multiplication the state would soon lose control of the public health situation.
- 5 The most serious damage would come from licensing limited practitioners to treat with impunity, infectious contagious and venereal diseases which they are not trained to recognize; and permit the filling of causes of death by those who have no knowledge or means of ascertaining such causes.
- 6 The enactment of the chiropractic proposal would make the morbidity and mortality statistics of the Department of Health valueless.
- 7 There should be no multiplication of licensing boards for limited practitioners, nor should the present licensing system be submerged in any plan awarding special privilege.
- 8 The constitutionality of the Medical Practices Act of Ohio has been sustained and the act has been commended as adequate by the highest courts of the land.
- 9 If there should be any modification of the educational standards of those who treat the sick it should be to raise and not lower the requirements.
- 10 The Initiated proposal is burdened with so many dangerous possibilities, with so many inconsistencies, and it would raise so many legal and constitutional questions, that it would be extremely unsafe to enact it even in any amended form.

Leaving "Sonny" A Legacy Of $60,000

You would like to leave that Eight-Year-Old of yours a legacy of $60,000, wouldn't you and here are some figures that will prove it is not impossible after all.

Statistics prove that college graduates average $60,000 greater earnings during their lifetime than non-graduates; so four well spent college years are an investment that will net Sonny $60,000 over the period of his life, if the law of averages holds true.

A normal amount to allow for a college education is $456 a year, or a total of $1,824 for the period, and you have 10 years to get this amount together. Saving less than $15 a month will do it, and here is where we can help you.

Because of the buying resources of this great family of stores you enjoy everyday savings that amount to considerable at the end of the month. Suppose you check our values and prices very carefully, and see for yourself how much of that $15 you can save by buying here next month.

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild harmless salt which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active. Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

CLUB MEMBERS FROM GREENE COUNTY AT COLUMBUS MEETING

Congress of Ohio farm boys and girls, an event better known as the thirteenth annual Club Week for 4-H Club members, convened in Columbus November 7 to 12, with an attendance of close to 500 delegates from eighty-one of Ohio's eighty-eight counties.

Those receiving the trip from Greene County are as follows: Mary Eleanor Ford, Xenia Township; Helen Edgington, Sugar Creek Township; Opal Elliott, Ross Township; Nelson Moore, Xenia Township; George McHenry, Sugar Creek Township; Robert Smith, Jefferson Township.

Farm boys and girls attending this congress as guests of the Ohio State University represent the 28,000 members of 4-H clubs in Ohio this year. Delegates for the Columbus trip were chosen on nomination of club leaders and after examination of their records in raising a pig or calf, learning to sew or to bake, or whatever their project may have been.

The boys raised by the state 4-H Club leaders, representing the agricultural college extension service at the university, the program lists talks by Governor Donahey, Judge Florence Allen, Gertrude Warren of the United States Department of Agriculture, and members of the university staff. Travelogues are an important part of the program. Informal talks by the youngsters themselves will figure as important as talks by adults. Each day of the week there is scheduled a series of group discussions in which club delegates will talk over 4-H Club problems, detect the weaknesses of Club projects and suggest ways to fortify them. Recreation and sight-seeing in Columbus will also play a part in the week's activities.

The following committee will be in charge: Dr. W. N. Shank, chairman; the Rev. A. J. Furstenberger and the Rev. R. S. Burkett. The proposal was made that all church people read Matthew and John during the two months, January and February, pamphlets to be distributed to all the church families of Xenia.

UNION SERVICES OPENED AT CHURCH

The combined evening services, being held Sunday evenings by the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches, opened Sunday night with a good attendance, when the Rev. D. A. Sellers preached on the

REGAIN CHILDHOOD'S STURDY DIGESTION

How You can Safely Eat whatever You Fancy

Do you remember the school days long ago when your appetite was good and you could "eat anything"? Perhaps you yearn for a digestion like that now? You can have it, and easily too! Most digestive trouble is due to excess stomach acid which ferments the food and causes painful gases to dilate your stomach. Obviously you can only end indigestion and stomach pain by ridding yourself of this root cause, acidity.

The quickest, surest and safest way to do this is to take a little "Pape's Diapepsin" after eating or when pain is felt. This brings prompt relief because it instantly neutralizes the excess acid in your stomach and then soothes, heals and strengthens the acid-weakened tissues.

"Pape's Diapepsin" is of such great value in the treatment of digestive troubles that millions everywhere use and recommend it. Don't delay—get a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapepsin" from your druggist to-day. It will give you instant relief, so that instead of suffering after each meal you will always enjoy healthy, carefree digestion.—Adv.

HENRY FORD'S CASH WOULD WEIGH 2,000 TONS SOMEONE SAYS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Henry Ford's wealth, if converted into gold, would weigh 2,000 tons and take as many of his own trucks to haul it around—assuming that the diver king is worth a billion dollars.

Figures obtained from Frank White, treasurer of the United States, today showed that America's money gold supply, on the scales, would equal 9,000 tons. World gold stocks are almost double that weight.

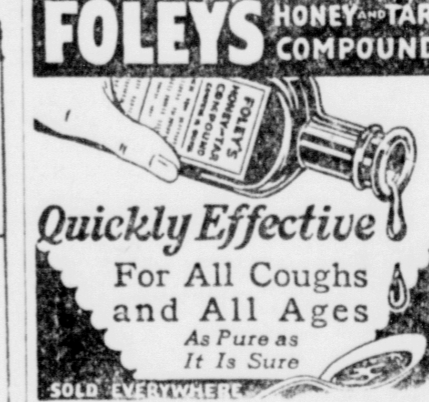

There is more gold in the New York assay office than any other one spot in the world—an average of $2,000,000,000 or about 4,000 tons, according to White.

Out of the country's total gold coin and bullion of $4,581,000,000, the treasury is in possession of $3,639,000,000. For every dollar of paper money there must be an equal amount of gold or silver in the treasury vaults, but at present, owing to the great inward movement of gold to United States since the war, the ratio is considerably higher.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank—probably the most solidly backed financial institution in the world—has a gold reserve of $1,024,513,000 far exceeding that of most nations. Only a nominal amount of actual gold, however, is maintained at the bank, its reserve being made up to a considerable extent of gold certificates, the physical backing being in the treasury.

Doctor at 83 Finds People Still Prefer His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE. Adv.

A NEW INTIMACY OF NATIONS

The information that telephone communication has been opened between the United States and several Mexican cities, following upon the recent completion of telephone communication between the United States, Great Britain and other European points is of the utmost importance. It heralds a day, probably closer than most of us realize, when world distances will be conquered and the limitations of space done away with.

Bell talked to a man in the next room, and the world rose in homage to the achievement. Soon people in large cities could talk with their neighbors, then lines were strung from one locality to another, culminating in the trans-continental service we are all used to. And now it is trans-oceanic. There is a great romance and a great achievement in the story of the American telephone, and recent developments show that the system keeps one jump ahead of the times as it always has. A new age of international understanding, a new intimacy of nations, is in the making.

IMPROVED SERVICE

The electric railway industry during the past few years has endeavored to give better service. It recognized that if it was to live and prosper it was necessary to renovate its viewpoint and adopt new methods and procedures. It has added new and modern equipment, has paid more attention to its personnel, has given the public more information as to its needs and necessities, and has endeavored to render service under trying circumstances in a gracious and attentive way.

It has steadfastly maintained that it is rendering a necessary service to the people, and its efforts at salesmanship during the past few years have been noteworthy; with the result that in many instances much good has accrued, not only to the industry but to the people as well.

ALWAYS DESTROYING

H. L. Mencken, foremost critic of America and its people, has no constructive ideas by which he may build up after he destroys, declares Upton Sinclair in "The Bookman."

According to Mr. Sinclair, "The darling and idol of the young intelligentsia has no message to give them, except that they are free to do what they please. Mencken," he says, "has 'made his school,' as the French say; he has raised up a host of young persons as clever as their master, and able to write with the same shillelah swing.

"Mencken is in a Berserk rage against stupidity, dullness, and sham. If you ask Mencken what is the remedy for these horrors, he will tell you they are the natural and inevitable manifestations of the boobus Americanus. If you ask him why then labor so monstrously, he will say that it is for his own enjoyment. But watch him awhile, and you will see the light of hilarity die out of his eyes, and you will note lines of tiredness in his face, and lines of not quite perfect health, and you will realize that he is lying to himself and to you; he is a new-style crusader, a Christian Anti-Christ, a tireless propagandist of no-propaganda.

"For the present, that is all that is required; that is the mood of time, cynicism, ridicule, and contempt for democratic bungling. But some day the time spirit will change; America will realize that its problems really have to be solved, and that will take serious study of exploitation and wage slavery, of co-operation and the democratic control of industry—matters concerning which Mencken is as ignorant as any Babbittboob. Sooner or later my friend Mencken will have to face these new facts, and choose between the bloody reaction of Fascism and the new dawn of industrial brotherhood."

The Way of the World

THE LESSON

If youth, with all its progressiveness and buoyancy, could only learn one great lesson that comes with advancing years, so much disillusionment and unhappiness would be prevented. If youth could only learn, while it is still youth, that there are certain fundamental things which it can not do and "get away with," certain things that must be done and must not be done, certain things that are not only conventional but essential, half the tears of boyhood and girlhood would never flow.

PATIENCE

Dr. Paul Straussman, great Berlin doctor now visiting in America, is amazed by some things in the United States. He finds we have imagination reflected in great buildings, and he is impressed by the life and speed of our cities. He is interested in prohibition. He says: "Perhaps prohibition will be a success in one, two, or maybe three generations, but not yet. You can't change a country's habits in one year or five."

Dr. Straussman might have added that a nation doesn't change its habits entirely in a generation. Just because prohibition is a new and difficult idea is no reason that the experiment will not in the end prove successful. Anything that is right in principle will endure. It takes patience.

GOING, NOT COMING

Not so much talk about immigration as there was a few years ago. The law, sensational at the time, which reduces the number of foreigners coming to our shores to a handful, is still in operation. The facts are astonishing. Since 1924 approximately three times as many common laborers have returned to Europe as have come to this country. The effect of the law has doubtless been to raise the standard of living in the United States. Americans expect and get higher wages than foreigners. And they spend more freely.

The Daybook

OF A
New Yorker

By
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Illustrative of the remarkable tolerance of New York and of New Yorkers, I offer the following. A gentleman in a long black frock coat which had seen the peak of its career long before, and clad also in a wiry beard of generous proportions, to say nothing of a head of hair like an animal, which might have been the envy of Samson, walks through City Hall park. He is hatless and it is chilly. From the rear, he looks like an animated mattress, which overflows at the top. And yet no one disturbs him; indeed, only a few give him a second glance.

Again, a very pretty young man walks down Eighth avenue—not Fifth but Eighth, mind you! He is either wearing rouge or he has a high fever and it does not appear from his jaunty stride, that he is sick. His attire is faultless—striped trousers, morning coat, and top hat. Also spats. In his hand is a rose, which, as he proceeds, he wafts poetically and daintily back and forth under his lovely nose. And, alas for the effeminate subway workers, they say not a word. Yet in the most of American cities, men have been and are being shot for less than this!

I remember a young man who told me that he was forced to give up a hike from Chicago to New York because his clothing did not please residents along his route. In every small town, the youth of the place were unanimously of the opinion that only ripe tomatoes were suitable as missiles against one who wore plus fours. And in the hazy olden days of Indiana, my friend gave up. There the sons of toil, indicated their disapproval of his knickers with paving bricks and BB guns.

It would be interesting to learn just how much provocation a New Yorker needs to cause him to utter a loud and scornful sneer.

Among current sidewalk attractions are: the chef in the window of the Rotisserie restaurant on upper Broadway; the sidewalk underneath the Tango palace, where large crowds gather nightly to listen to the music of jazz band within; the lizzie disguised as a locomotive which puffs steam from a radiator-smoke stack, as it wanders around the theatrical district in search of alms for the alleged disabled veteran who operates it; the demonstration of a new outfit in a window near the Capitol in which those outside can start the car within by pressing on a marked spot on the window. The car runs up and down a short track.

Add new kinds of stunt advertising. Walking up Broadway last night crowds were staring at an elderly gentleman in faultless evening dress, who was sauntering along. He was a most distinguished looking man, bearing mustache and goatee. He might have been a visiting ambassador. But he obviously was not, since, through the transparent surface of his starched breast, a red electric sign regularly flashed the legend: "FOR REAL ENJOYMENT CMOKE R-CIGARS, THEY'RE MELLOW!"

Questions People Ask
If an all-wise power should agree to answer any questions people might ask, the chances are that most of the queries would be unimportant. We humans seem to have a predilection for getting interested in all manner of inconsequential topics.

Managers of information bureaus conducted by various newspapers have long marveled at the range of trivial things people wish to know—such questions as the height of the Woolworth building, the number of times a famous actress has been married, or the average weight of mules. Questions that do not matter are asked over and over.

"Nothing, in my opinion," I heard a great banker remark, "injuries a man's credit rating more than having a reputation as a liar. Every banker is gun-shy of liars. We had a certain man come in our bank one day seeking a loan, and his account promised to be of such consequence that he appeared to be well worth while as a customer. He submitted a proposition which investigation proved to contain several ingeniously hidden bits of misrepresentation. These were brought to his attention, and he promptly agreed to remedy any defects in the proposed negotiation. But we did not enter into any deal with him. We did not wish to have him as a customer. You see, he had tried to fool us and failed that time, but sooner or later he would succeed in fooling us."

The practice followed by young movie addicts, and others, of adding oil to their hair to give themselves a fashionable bee-like appearance, is a great boon to hat manufacturers. The hair oil soaks through the sweat band and discolors the hat. An enterprising hat manufacturer could almost afford to pay a liberal bonus to all barbers who talk their customers into using hair tonics.

Not All The Miracles Are Confined to The New Testament

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDA H. McGLONE GIBSON
ENTHUSIASM

One sometimes wonders what attains the most—the woman of enthusiasm or the woman of poise.

The woman of enthusiasm can always work herself up to great heights. If she is allowed to follow the line of her ambition, she will strain every nerve, put every ounce of energy into the undertaking, labor early and late to put it through, but if she is apt to make those about her quite as unhappy as she is.

The woman of poise is always very agreeable to meet. She is a reasonable creature, sane and understanding; but she seldom gets very much excited over anything or anybody. She is the kind of woman who rarely makes a mistake; indeed, her correctness of opinion makes you feel childish.

She is not apt to tire you. You are quiet and made comfortable in her presence, but unless you have a brain of uncommon, almost brittle, brilliancy, you are apt to become stagnated if you come in contact with her often.

I have never known but one woman of great poise whom I admired greatly. This is Annie Besant of the Theosophical Society. She lives now, as you know, in India, where she is an incalculable influence over that spurious people. Whether she would be able to exert that same influence over a people of different temperament from those where she has elected to live, one does not know.

I would rather have followed, the banner of a Theodore Roosevelt than a Judge Taft; one impulsive, splendid even in his mistakes, honest in his endeavor, enthusiastic always—the other, logical, with a mind of mathematical legality, always weighing with judicial temperament his actions as well as yours, one who may choose the same way but never the adventurous one.

The enthusiastic person, after all, is the person who does things. If Columbus had not had great enthusiasm he would not have been the discoverer of the new world. It is only the enthusiasts who have died for an idea; it is only the enthusiasts who will fight for an idea; it is only the enthusiasts who are able to sell their ideas to the phlegmatic and unthinking.

Markus Aurelius was the great exemplification of poise, of sanity, of the reasonable thinking of his day. Only the cultured few know about him today.

Jesus Christ was the greatest enthusiast the world has ever known—and all Christians bow at the shrines erected in His name.

Poise is a very wonderful, beautiful thing, and yet it almost seems at times that it is rather a selfish attitude to take. It virtually says, "Who are you that may disturb the peace of my soul?"

To most people the enthusiasts, even when they are mistaken, are much more interesting than those who pride themselves upon their great calmness in the face of all impulse and all disaster, for it is the enthusiasts that really live.

Memo: It is the enthusiast who drives this old world forward; and the people of poise who hold it in the right direction.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

WHAT YOUR WEIGHT SHOULD BE

Beauty is more than skin deep. Your outward appearance and expression are based on your entire system, your habits of living, your mode of thought in short, general physical and mental health.

Since both your mental and physical health depend so much upon your diet, I am going to devote this week to telling you how to select and proportion the food you take into your body.

First, you must determine whether you weigh what you should weigh. Your weight will tell you whether you need to remedy any defects in the proposed negotiation. But we did not enter into any deal with him. We did not wish to have him as a customer. You see, he had tried to fool us and failed that time, but sooner or later he would succeed in fooling us."

Many women have a misconception about what they should weigh because they do not consider all the factors that go into it. When you determine your proper weight, you have to consider more than just so many pounds or so many feet and inches. You should have a different weight from a man your same age and height. Then you should not weigh the same when you are a young girl as you will when you have reached mature years.

For instance, a woman of 50 should weigh from twenty to thirty pounds more than a girl of 19 of the same height. A girl 19 years old and five feet, three inches, tall should weigh 120 pounds. The homes and well-kept lawns, will always attract others.

MENU HINT

Want a menu for a "company" dinner? How is this for a change? Its preparation will not tax the housewife too much and I am sure the food will please any guest unless he or she be on a diet.

Mint Grapefruit
Olives Celery
Baked Stuffed Pork Chops
Baked Potatoes Health Salad
Creamed Butter Beans
French Bread Lemon Fluff Tea
Coffee

Today's Recipes.

Mint Grapefruit—Core grapefruit, remove skin between sections and sprinkle with crushed after-dinner mints. Place a green cherry in the center and a sprig of mint on the serving plate.

Stuffed Pork Chops—Have the butcher cut double chops and cut a deep opening for the dressing, make a dressing of one-fourth pound sausage meat, one egg, one-fourth cup bread crumbs, dash of celery salt. Pack this into the opening in the chops, and fasten together with three toothpicks. Dip the chops in flour, brown in a moderate oven for an hour.

Health Salad—Shred one-half head cabbage, outer stalks bunch of celery, one-half small green pepper, one grated carrot. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with French dressing.

Lemon Fluff Tarts—Bake pastry shells in deep muffin tins. Filling: Two eggs, one-half cup sugar, two tablespoons lemon juice, three tablespoons cold water. Place egg yolks, half the sugar and lemon juice in top of double boiler. Beat hard, and when thoroughly blended, add gelatin (previously dissolved in cold water) and remaining sugar. Continue to beat until mixture begins to thicken. Remove from fire and stir into the stiffly beaten whites. When cold, pour into pastry shells, and just before serving, top with whipped cream. This amount makes three generous tarts, and twice this amount makes one good-sized pie.

MINT CUP—FOR FIRST COURSE AT DINNER

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Teetotal Recipe.)
Cut two grapefruits in halves and remove the pulp; add one pint pineapple (canned or fresh) cut in small pieces; one-half pound white grapes, halved and seeded; pulp of three oranges; add a little sugar if sour, and just before serving, sprinkle with mint leaves over mixture. Serve very cold in frappe glasses with maraschino cherry on top.

"You have acted very wrongly." Thus Horace's father, in the presence of Horace's mother, to Horace, discovered in the act of stealing jam. "It may seem a small offense, Horace," he continued, "but it has for its foundations one of the prime causes of the world's unhappiness—disobedience. I am more than angry. I am grieved. I want my son to grow up a fine, strong, honorable man. I want him—Here he paused for breath. Little Horace turned enthusiastically to his mother: "Mamma," he cried, "Isn't papa interesting?"

Behind The Scenes
In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

SENATORSHIP MAY BE PINCHOT'S AMBITION

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Gift and Pinchot has just given the tip, through a Washington newspaper, that he shouldn't be forgotten when Republican presidential possibilities are being listed.

That is to say, he gave an interview to Judson C. Welliver, former White House chief clerk, who recently returned to capital journalism, and Jud supplemented it with the information that ex-Gov. Pinchot's name is mentioned in connection with the presidency—which is true, too, now that Jud's mentioned it.

Gift has been living in Washington since he retired from the Pennsylvania governorship, but many people live in Washington whose political residences are elsewhere. Gift's spiritual—or, shall we say, candidatorial—home is in Philadelphia.

Pennsylvania is a somewhat scrambled state for a Republican presidential candidate to hail from. It's Republican enough, goodness knows—but is that an advantage? Why should a party waste a presidential nomination on a state that's dead sure to give said party's ticket a big majority anyway—with doubtful states hanging in the balance.

Besides, the Keystone State's afflicted with a political scandal or two, which the choice of one of its "favorite sons," for such high national office, would only serve to emphasize.

Nevertheless, Jud's nomination of ex-Gov. Pinchot for the presidency is interesting, in its way whatever may prove to be its ultimate importance—and motive.

On his own individual account, Judson Churchill Welliver is a person of considerable consequence. He was political expert in the capital for the late Frank Munsey, when the latter was a factor in journalism, as well as in the chain grocery business. He was publicist for the Harding campaign, graduating thence into the White House chief clerkship, where he was credited with the authorship of several highly significant executive utterances, extending on to the Coolidge regime.

Then we find him in New York, as head of the Petroleum Institute devoted to the welfare of our national oil interests—and finally, after a brief journalism interlude in Pittsburgh, back in the Washington newspaper field again.

From this summary, we might infer that Jud was a conservative—which G. Pinchot assuredly isn't. Not necessarily, however. Originally Jud came from the Corn Belt—as a thoroughly saturated with its philosophy as the next man.

He's recalled by old-timers as one of the "white-haired boys" of the era of President Roosevelt—and don't let's forget that nobody was thicker with Col. Roosevelt than Chief Forester Pinchot, who furnished Jud with that recent interview, on the subject of conservation. It has the ring of two decades ago.

Jud isn't the chap to miscanthology that Pennsylvania's a good taking-off state for the presidency just now, but there may be a senatorial vacancy available there—maybe two.

David A. Reed's term expires in 1926 and there's no certainty that William S. Vare will be seated next year.

It doesn't hurt a senatorial candidate to be regarded by the voters of his state as having been a "near thing" for the presidency.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

The Happy Marriage

What are the requisites for a happy marriage, I wonder? One of my readers writes in and tells just what they are, in her estimation. And I'm wondering what the rest of you think. Here is her letter:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I notice the title of your column is 'Living and Loving.' I have not seen any letters from any one in reference to living. Marriage to too many of our young people is nonsensical. What would you think of two birds starting housekeeping without a nest?"

"I would suggest to 'Reader' to sit on her lover's lap, but before doing so provide herself with paper and pencil, tell him she has $500 in cash or a hope chest of that value. Now ask him how much he has saved. If he has less than $1,000 and an automobile she had better get off his lap and tell him there is nothing doing until he gets his $1,000. Any young man who has $1,000 and an automobile and whose best girl has $500 may enter into a happy marriage under certain conditions. First they should buy a home.

"The young man should have steady employment, getting more than $100 a month. All pay envelopes should be opened when both are present. The house after expenses are paid should be deposited in the bank to the credit of both. They were pronounced one and there should be no difficulty in their acting as a unit.

TITANIA.

I did not have room for all your letter, Titania. And, by the way, what a fairylike name you choose for such a practical person. Might I point out that birds do not court their own skill in nest building. Their plan would be all right—if it does sound a bit cold-blooded—but nature does not mate men and women like that. She is naturally venturesome and experimental and seldom has good financial reasons for making a match. And after all, living and loving are inseparable, are they not? We really live only as we love, whether we love wisely or not.

Here's a word of cheer and advice to the girls and boys who are suffering from love sickness:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I would like to say a few words to the girls of 16 and 17 who think they are so madly in love. I know all about it, girls, because when I was 16 I was so very much in love that when my mother pleaded with me to give him up, I said, 'How can I? It will break my heart.' But I did give him up and my heart never broke. It was not very long before I saw what a bad mess I would have made of my life if I had not listened to mother. Oh, my dears, mothers know best. I am 24 now and have been married a whole year to the most wonderful of husbands. Girls, when you are pleading yourself on your wedding day you are either making your future or wrecking it. If you can stand and look straight into your mother's eyes and read approval you are on the right road to happiness. Thank you, dear Virginia Lee. A HAPPY WIFE."

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent

No Use for Her Umbrella
Peter had never been more amazed in his life.

"Gee whiz! How can you snap your wings together like that, Mrs. Flittermouse? Are they wired?"

"No, boned!" answered the impolite sister, promptly. "Nothing strange about that, is there? You have bones in your own hands, if I am not mistaken, and so why shouldn't I?"

"No reason in the world, but I should think they would crack when you brought them together," replied the boy, thoughtfully. "A bird's wings are covered with feathers and he closes them up like a fan and slowly—not with a jerk as you do. He may have bones in his wings; I have never heard! But if he has, the feather make a soft padding for them."

"Stuff and nonsense! Skin is as good as feathers! Who wants to be a bird? Certainly no Bat!"

Peter was thinking so deeply that he did not notice Mrs. Flittermouse Second was growing. Now he chuckled.

"What are you laughing at, young Two-Legs?" demanded the impolite sister, sharply.

"At nothing much," answered the boy. "I was only thinking that there is not much use in carrying an umbrella about with you if you can't get under it when it rains. And your wings are only umbrellas when they are closed up. But perhaps in a storm you open them wide and hold them spread over your head and keep under cover that way."

"I do nothing of the sort!" The impolite sister shook her head, and if Peter had been on his guard, he would have noticed Mrs. Flitter-

mouse Second was growing madder by the minute. "Long before raindrops fall I find a cool spot—a church tower, perhaps, or a sheltering cave—and there I hide until the moon or the stars come out. And if the rain lasts all night long, there all night long I stay, and all the next day, too, for if there is one thing I hate 'tis the heat of the noontime sun. When the twilight comes again and all is clear, I leave the shelter for the fields and forest. All this can be nothing to you, however. Why are you so interested in a Bat's business? For no good reason, I'll warrant! You'll find no more of from me!"

Xenia Merchants Lose First Game On Sunday

BUCKINGHAMS SHOW STRONG ATTACK BUT WERE FORCED HARD

Xenia Team Performs Ably For First Game Of Season

Playing their initial game of the season, the Xenia Merchants were defeated by the Buckingham Clothiers of Dayton, 9 to 0 Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Dayton's first score came early in the first period when Captain Zimmerman, right end, booted a field goal from the twenty-five yard line.

Dayton registered the only touchdown of the contest in the fourth quarter in the last minute of play. Time and again the visitors had rushed the ball to inside Xenia's ten-yard line only to lose possession on fumbles. Finally, Steiner returned a punt to Xenia's ten and Ackerman plucked off left tackle for the score. Zimmerman's kick for goal was wide.

In the first period an intercepted pass on Xenia's forty-yard line paved the way for the field goal. The visitors marched to the fifteen-yard line where the Merchants braced and held. On the fourth down, Zimmerman stepped back and place-kicked a perfect goal.

The Buckingham registered nine first downs during the contest, using straight football methods. Xenia made four first downs, due largely to forward passes. Dayton attempted only three forwards and all were incomplete.

Of six passes attempted, Xenia completed two for a net gain of fifty-five yards. Three were grounded and one was intercepted.

Dayton tried two place kicks for field goals in the first half but both were wide of their mark.

The Buckingham have won six games and lost only one this season. The Merchants suffered from lack of practice while the line was also weak and yielded to assaults. Zimmerman and Daum scintillated for Dayton while "Bull Dog" Smith, Towles and L. Purdon were outstanding in the Xenia lineup. Towles furnished two sensational runs, one for twenty yards and a second good for thirty yards. He was also on the receiving end of a pass which netted forty yards.

Merchants crossed the Dayton eleven on this occasion as the ball was on Xenia's twenty-yard line, fourth down and fourteen yards to go for first down.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE BOASTING STRONG GRID SQUAD

Cedarville College's 1927 football team was conceded to be one of the strongest in the school's history. This is not manifest by the record this year but the Yellow Jackets lost six games, four by one touchdown and another by a single point. Two victories were registered over Antioch College, something heretofore never accomplished, while Earlham College was held to a 13 to 13 tie.

The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose TEN cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible. NOT OVER 200 WORDS, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. TREATMENT FOR COLDS

In Saturday's paper I pointed out the importance of diet and other factors in keeping the mucus membranes resistant to disease. Today I want to take up the treatment of colds.

The preliminary symptoms of colds are usually dryness of the nose and dryness and soreness of throat. Often a local treatment with a swab or spray with an antiseptic solution applied two or three times a day, will kill off the germs and abort a cold.

The following formulas are good: Eucalyptus oil, 30 drops; menthol, 10 grains; camphor, 15 grains; liquid petrolatum, 4 ounces. One-fourth iodine and three-fourths glycerine is also a good formula. Gargle or spray the throat often with hot water (and drink a liberal amount, too). A teaspoonful of baking soda and a teaspoonful of salt to the pint of water will make the gargle more effective. Follow this with the oil or glycerine.

This treatment can be continued during the cold if you do not succeed in aborting it. For the nasal treatment, and for the throat also, it is best to get a good atomizer giving a strong, coarse spray.

If you massage around the outside of the nose, under the ears and jaws, with the fingers or with the electric vibrator machine, the parts and will send the stagnating blood onward. A hot sweating bath, if you go to bed afterward and do not get chilled, often helps in the beginning of a cold. A mild cathartic is necessary only if you are constipated. Keep very warm all during a cold, but have fresh air night and day, and take some long, brisk walks.

If you do not succeed in aborting a cold, it will take a definite course. Like other infectious diseases, it is self-limited. Sooner or later the system manufactures a defense which overcomes it. One cold, instead of making one immune, predisposes one to another, so try to get yourself up to par as soon as possible. Unless you are under the care of a physician, internal drugs should not be used.

If a cold is very bad, it is best to stay in bed for a few days. Have a paper bag planned near to put the soiled handkerchiefs or cloths in, and have them boiled before they are handled again. It is best to use tissue paper and have it burned.

If you are suffering from a cold, and have to take care of a baby, you must wear a mask of several thicknesses of gauze over your nose and mouth when you handle him, and wash your hands thoroughly before and after you touch him or any of his food.

If you should get an acute cold while you are on a reducing diet, it is best to go back to maintenance diet. It is not necessary to gain more than the two or three pounds which will be caused by water retention. The diet should be an easily-digested one, consisting largely of fruits, vegetables, milk and cereals, omitting the meats, fish and egg-white for a period. Don't over-eat or under-eat.

Catarrh
Chronic colds may become "catarrh." Sometimes this causes infection of the sinuses (the cavities in the facial bones which connect with the nose). This inflammation may clear up under ultra-violet ray treatments, or a surgical operation to cause drainage. Better see a nasal specialist for catarrh. (Ozena is a form of dry catarrh with a very offensive odor.) The general treatment is the same as for a cold.

Asthma
In asthma the mucus membranes have usually become sensitized to emanations from different substances, such as animal hair or feathers in mattresses, furs, clothing, or from live animals, such as cats, dogs, rabbits, horses, etc. Sometimes the protein of certain foods — milk, eggs, meat, fish — especially if in excess, may cause asthma.

Hay Fever
Hay fever is due to a sensitization to plant pollens. The same general directions for colds can be followed.

In hay fever and asthma cases made of the offending substance which precipitates the attack are often effective. See your physician about having protein tests made to determine what is acting in your case. No doubt the ultra-violet rays would help.

Meanwhile, test things out for yourself. Stop sleeping on feather pillows, exclude dogs and cats and other animals, maybe even mohair-covered furniture (mohair is goat's hair).

Build up your general health. Tomorrow—Answers to Mothers. NOTE: Please send in stamped, addressed envelope with requests for answers.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—Members of rural boys' and girls' clubs, in Columbus this week for the annual club congress at the Ohio State University, will attend one of the most unusual banquets ever held here, it will be held November 8, and has been arranged by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation with more than twenty rural organizations supporting the affair.

Much of the food served to the club members will be furnished by farmers' co-operative organizations, which are marketing these products.

During afternoon the regular program of the congress will recess and the club members will be taken for a trip around the city by members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and organizations arranging the banquet. Nearly 800 people, including the club members, are expected to gather for the banquet.

The speaking program following the banquet will be short. Invocation to be given by Rev. Daniel F. Rittenhouse. A welcome will be given by Murray D. Lincoln, secretary of the state farm bureau, and a response by W. H. Palmer, state club leader. Frederick A. Miller will give the chief talk on "The Problem on the Youth."

Money Love

By BEATRICE BURTON Author of "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "HONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

LILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled and only daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, who have always lived beyond their means. She realizes her highest ambition when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor older than herself. On the day after she promises to marry him she goes downtown to meet her chum, SUE CAIN, and sees a man watching her through the crowd. She feels oddly attracted by him before she sees that he is a taxi driver. She jumps into the cab and asks him to drive her home. On the way she learns that he owns the cab, is "hipped" on automobiles, and is cab driving to raise money to finance a kind of piston ring he has invented. Lily takes the identification card, bearing his picture and name, PAT FRANCE, as she gets out. That night he comes for it, and Staley overhears his talk with Lily, and asks her if she's been carrying on a flirtation with a cab driver. Lily indignantly says she hasn't—but she has.

Next day she hunts Pat up and asks him to drive to ANN BARNEY'S for lunch. Ann is a nice, sensible girl, who's in love with Staley, but she takes the new of the engagement coldly. Lily drives home with Sue and tells her how infatuated she is with an almost unknown man, and next day she points out Pat, on his cab, to Sue, who's horrified at her school-girl infatuation and the shameless way Lily begs Pat to drive her home. However, he refuses to. He tells her that he is selling the cab to raise money for the piston ring, and she miserably wonders how she'll see him after that. She keeps his card, telling him she has it.

In the meantime Mrs. Lexington plans a big dinner party to announce the engagement, and on the night of it Staley comes to the house early to see Lily alone. He tells her the age-difference between them doesn't matter, and tenderly kisses her. Lily realizes that she hates his love making.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY) CHAPTER VII

"I ought to tell him I don't love him," Lily thought, with Staley's arms around her, holding her close to him. "It's not too late even now—but it will be an hour from now, when all the guests will be here. He's engaged. If I'm going to do anything—if I'm going to be honest—I ought to tell him now."

She braced herself to do it, as a swimmer braces himself for a dive into icy waters. And she would have done it then, had it not been for the fact that she was so nervous that she couldn't get the words out.

It played one now on Lily. The door of the small library at the end of the hall opened, and out walked Mr. Lexington in the dinner jacket and high stiff collar that he hated to wear. He came straight down the hall, his face beaming with pleasure all around the cigar he was smoking. He laid one hand on the shoulder of Staley's beautifully tailored coat.

"Well, my boy," he said, heartily, "this is a great day for us—when we welcome you into the family."

Then he laid his other hand on the round, white arm of his daughter and looked at her with pride and love in his eyes. "Lily's mother and I feel that she's in good hands when she goes to you," he added, and Lily could see that he meant it.

Then the doorbell rang, and Sue Cain came with Jack Eastman. The evening had begun.

As Lily led Sue upstairs to her room, she felt baffled and downhearted. It was too late now to do anything. Down in the hall Jack Eastman was saying something that Lily could not hear, but she knew that he was congratulating Staley already.

The trap had sprung. She was in it now—caught.

"Well, I breathe a sigh of relief because you've made up your mind that you want Staley after all," Sue said when Staley and Lily were together in the big, luxurious guestroom upstairs. She took a tiny gold comb from her gold-brocaded evening bag and began to work with her hair before the glass as she talked.

"Far be it from me to advise you to marry a man you don't care about," she went on, looking at Lily in the glass, "but you've been going around with Staley for such a long time that you must be crazy about him or you couldn't have stood him for so long."

She looked up at Lily, turning her dark little face, with its vivid red lips and eyes that were like two spots of black velvet in her artificial whiteness. But Lily kept perfectly still. No use to say anything now, she kept thinking. The time to say that she wasn't "crazy" about Staley had gone by.

"Besides, there's lots more to marriage than just love," Sue spoke again. "There's companionship—and Staley is your kind of person. He talks your language, and knows your kind of people. You'll always be great pals. And then there's money—Lily, you'd be a failure, a joke, and a total loss married to a poor man. To a man like—

"Oh, let's not talk about it!" Lily broke in quickly. It seemed to her that she couldn't bear to have Sue talk about Pat France that night, or even again. The only thing to do was to forget him—not to speak of him—not to think of him.

But when Sue wanted to talk about anything, she talked about it. It was as impossible to stop her as it is impossible to stop the rain from falling and the morning from coming.

"That certainly was a slick little turn-down you had the other day from that taxi driver," she said, musingly, and then she gave her wicked little giggle. "It tickled me to see you get it—after the way most men fall dead at your feet, old kid!"

Still giggling, she started down the stairs, and Lily went down after her, feeling about as cheerful as Daniel did when he descended into the den of lions.

That night Mrs. Lexington had all the things for her dinner party that her husband had told her they could not afford. She had the new butler to serve the dinner.

She had the banquet cloth of fluted lace and Italian cut-work that she had paid $500 for.

She had the silver-trimmed cocktail glasses, and tiny silver-trimmed liquor glasses that she had been weeping and pleading for for over two weeks.

She had a centerpiece of white orchids and red orchids for the middle of the table, and cloisonne and ash trays for favors.

"It was a marvellous dinner," she declared with great satisfaction when the last guest had left. She sat down before a little fire in the library and took off the silver-clash slippers that had been torturing her for hours, and began to pull some of the hairs from her hair. "But goodness it's over—although suppose life in this house will be very exciting from now until the dining day."

Her husband looked at her thoughtfully. "What do you suppose tonight's shindig set us back, Lily?" he asked, lifting his chin on the stiff collar that was rapping it.

Mrs. Lexington sighed and owned, "About money," she asked in a tired voice. "Tonight was lovely—we did our best by our little girl, and gave her a beautiful party. Everyone had such a good time."

"I didn't have a good time," said her husband, scowling. "We gave Lily a fine dinner all right, but we could have done it just as well with the old glasses and the tablecloth we've been using for parties right along, couldn't we? Gadzooks, every time the new butler came around with a plate, I felt as if he was a bill collector. What are we paying that bird anyway?"

"We're going to keep him only until the wedding, Cy," said Mrs. Lexington, not answering his question, "so please don't fuss. You have only one daughter, you know."

That had always been her chorus when she wanted things for Lily or the house that had to be beautiful and luxurious because it was Lily's home. "We're doing it for Lily, Cy." And so he had it, ways alone when she wanted it, no matter how hard he had to struggle to keep his head above the flood of debts.

Lily went to sleep that night to the sound of bickering in the library below her room—her father's low, protesting voice, and her mother's quick, angry tones.

"Perhaps Sue's right—and money is a big part of married life and happiness," she thought drowsily, her red-gold head pillow ed on her arms. "Mother and Dad would have been a lot happier if they'd had more money—that's certain."

And so she went on arguing with herself that maybe she was doing the right thing, and the smart thing by marrying Staley Drummond. Well she would be a good wife to him, at any rate—and she would have everything. Everything!

The next day was the second last-day of the month.

"Tomorrow will be the last day Pat drives his cab," thought Lily, sitting at the lunch table with her mother, an hour after she opened her eyes.

On the table before her were the remains of last night's feast. The salmon mayonnaise looked sad and sloppy, with the wilted lettuce around it. The rolls that had hardened overnight, the warmed-over potatoes with the cheese hardened around the edge of the baking dish.

It was a most unappetizing meal. But it had to be eaten, for Mrs. Lexington, economized by never wasting a crumb—and if one meal was feast, the next one was practically famine.

But Mrs. Lexington ate her dried-up roll as if it were food for the gods. Before her on the table was the morning paper, and on its "society" page was a large picture of Lily. She read the paragraph beneath it aloud with great gusto:

"Miss Lily Lexington, whose engagement to Mr. Staley Drummond was announced last evening at a dinner given by Miss Lexington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Lexington of Montpelier road."

"I wonder if Pat will see it," thought Lily, looking at the picture over her mother's shoulders. Suddenly longing to see him once more swept over her—after tomorrow she would have no more chances to run down town and into his cab and talk to him. Tomorrow would be the last day she would have his cab. And besides, it hurt no one if she simply spent a half hour with him, did it?

"But what if he refuses to let me into the cab the way he did the day I was with Sue," she said to herself, as she dressed in a new hat, and pinned some robin's egg blue flowers on her shoulder. "Well, I'll have to take that chance—that's all." She had to see him!

By a splendid stroke of luck his cab stood in Albemarle street. Lily's heart seemed to leap and bound when she saw it, and then to lie very still in her breast.

As she neared it she saw that Pat was talking to a small, plain girl in dark blue, who stood beside the cab, smiling up at him. "So this is how things are! This is why he treats me like a criminal, a vamp, and a door mat!" said Lily to herself. "He has a girl of his own!" And she felt a sudden scorching jealousy of the plain, small girl.

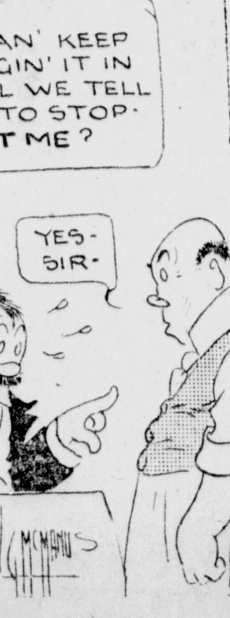

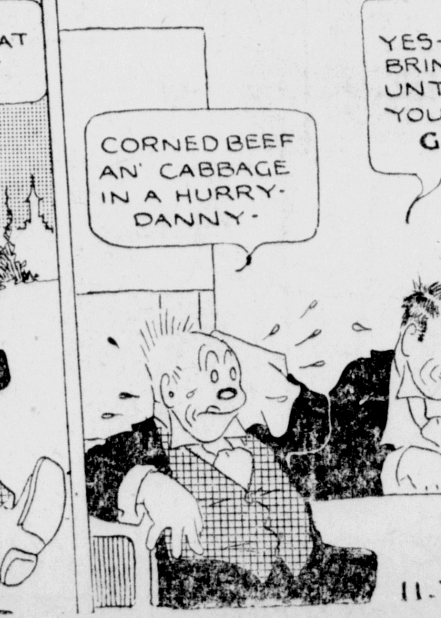

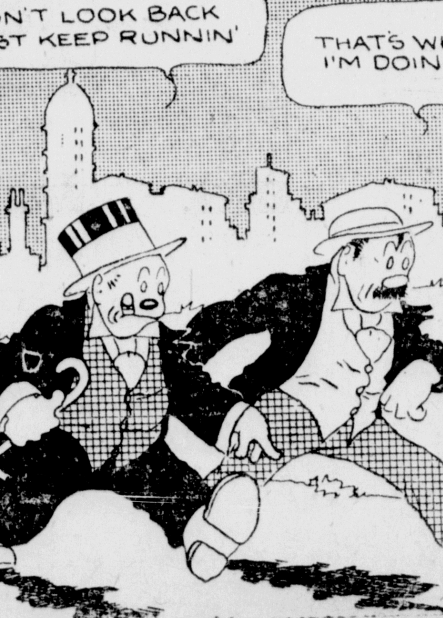

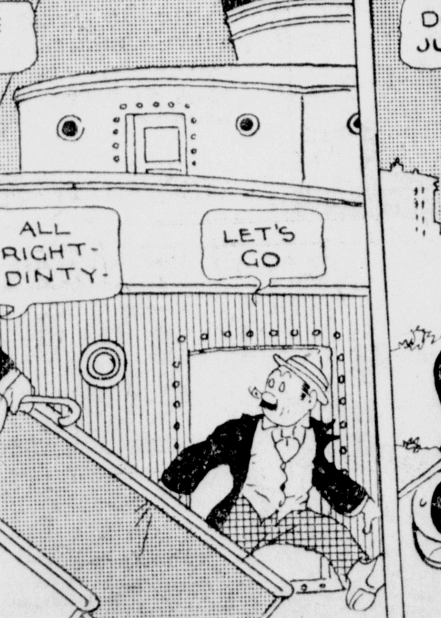

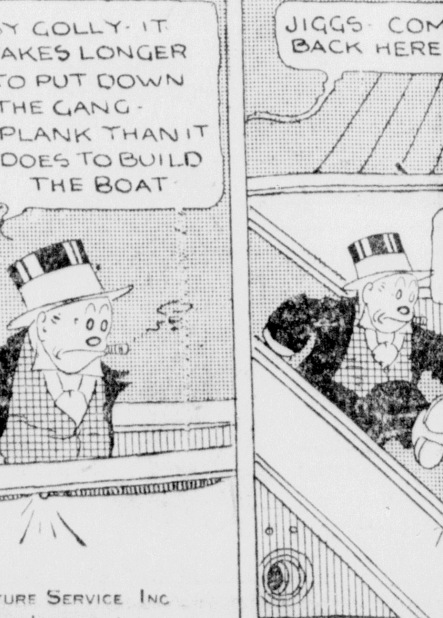

She walked straight up to the cab and laid her white-gloved hand on the door. "Are you busy, or could you take me for a passenger?" she asked, and from the corner of her eye she saw the small, plain girl in dark blue give Pat a small smile and then turn away into the crowd.

She got into the cab.

Tucked behind the jump seat was a folded newspaper, and Lily saw that part of it had been e-crowled. It was part of the society page of the morning paper—the part that had had her photograph on it!

The Theater

"Probably the most risqué piece ever put on the American stage," is what John V. A. Weaver has to say of "The Command to Love," starring Mary Nash, writing in "College Humor." The play is put on with a great cast, Weaver goes on to say and there is no leering about the subject, the players "coming right out to say and do things with, all their might."

The lily-pure play is a thing of the past in the opinion of Weaver. "Even Mr. Golden has seen the error of his ways," he says in commenting on "Four Walls." He calls this a drama "which, though not at all dirty, is realistic enough to startle his adherents." "I am glad Mr. Golden has made this change," Weaver continues, "for now he will see that there is almost as much money to be made, out of true re-

Antonio Salemme, sculptor, commissioned by the club, planned a life-size statue of the actress star, in a dancing frock posed in a dance step. Thirteen thousand people passed in a heavy rain to view the actress' body in a Harlem mortuary. Al Johnson sang at the funeral services Sunday. A choir of 600 voices and an orchestra of 200 musicians assisted in the services.

Her husband, Louis Dreyfuss, theatrical producer, was witnessing a first night production, when he received word his wife was dying. He failed to reach home before she expired.

DANIEL SMITH DIES SUDDENLY AT MOOSE LODGE HALL SUNDAY

Stricken with a sudden attack of heart trouble, from which he has recently suffered, Daniel A. Smith, 66, 222 N. West St., fell dead at the Moose Lodge Hall, W. Main St., about 9:30 o'clock Sunday night.

He had not complained of being ill during the day, but a short time before his death said he felt ill and obtained a drink. He suddenly fell over and the lodge janitor called a physician, who pronounced Mr. Smith dead when he arrived. He had been suffering from heart trouble about two months.

Mr. Smith was widely known as a shotgun expert and marksman and for several years traveled over the country as a professional marksman for one of the large arms manufacturing companies.

Mr. Smith was born in New Jasper, Mo., resided in Xenia several years. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Claretta Smith, two daughters, Mrs. Mason Whittington, W. Third St., and Mrs. Charles Berry, Bellevue, Ky., and one sister, Mrs. Lawson Hagler, Hook Road. Five grandchildren also survive.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 o'clock. Friends can call at the home after 6 p. m. Tuesday. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

CLEVELAND TO VOTE ON AMENDMENT THAT MAY OUST MANAGER

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 5.—Interest in this year's election here centers chiefly on the question as to whether or not local citizens will vote to retain the city manager form of municipal government, which has now been in effect for three years.

Under the present system of government, councilmen are elected in the customary manner and the council selects a city manager, the municipality's chief executive. The city manager's term of office is indefinite and the power of appointing and releasing him rests on the council.

Harry Davis, former governor and mayor, has initiated an amendment which amounts, practically, to a return to the old system of electing a mayor, by popular vote, for a certain, definite term of office. His chief argument is that the voters should have direct voice in selecting the city's highest executive.

Backers of the present form of government, however, that the old system was abandoned because it was found that municipal and public affairs were too much influenced by politics and graft and that the city has been operated on a much more efficient and economical basis in the last three years than it ever was under the old regime.

The issue has become more or less of a personal struggle between Davis and W. R. Hopkins, the present city manager. Two other proposed amendments to the present form of government have been placed on the ballot by Councilmen Harris and Friebohn but these have been almost forgotten and the campaign hinges chiefly on the question as to whether Cleveland voters favor the present form of government or the former system, as offered by the Davis amendment.

PARKED AUTOS MUST SHOW REAR LIGHTS

Police are instituting a campaign to educate motorists in the practice of displaying tail lights or curb lights on their automobiles at night when the machines are parked in the residential districts of the city.

Many accidents will be avoided if this law is obeyed, according to Peter Shagin, motorcycle policeman, who explains that the owner of an auto, which is parked without light, is at fault in case of an accident.

It is not absolutely necessary to display lights when autos are parked in the business section at night, but police intend to enforce the city ordinance in any case.

JOHN W. HEDGES IS DEAD; WAS ACTIVE IN G. A. R. AFFAIRS

John Hedges, 85, prominent Xenian, for fourteen years Xenia Trustee and candidate for re-election Tuesday, died at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Death followed the amputation of his left leg, performed last week, after gangrene had developed.

Despite his advanced age, Mr. Hedges was particularly active and was in his office daily until his last illness, which lasted several weeks.

He was born on a farm southwest of Xenia, off the Cincinnati Pike, October 19, 1842 and spent his entire life in Greene County. His marriage to Miss Virginia Bonner took place June 1, 1869. Mrs. Hedges preceded him in death in 1920.

Mr. Hedges enlisted in the Civil War when nineteen years of age and served three years with the 74th Regiment, O. V. I. He was active in the affairs of the G. A. R. and served as adjutant of Lewis Post several years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hedges had no children, and Mr. Hedges was the last member of his immediate family—only nieces and nephews surviving. He was a member of Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the residence on Chestnut St., with burial in Woodland Cemetery. Services at the house will be in charge of Lewis Post, G. A. R. Friends may call after 7 o'clock Monday evening.

PRAYERS LIGHT SHADOWS OF PRISON CELL

Woman Convicted Of Murder Attempt Asks For Forgiveness.

By J. C. JOHNSON
Staff Writer for Central Press and
The Xenia Gazette

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 7.—Mrs. Alberdina Frank is waiting for the state supreme court to tell her whether she must serve five years in the penitentiary.

She is the pretty, young wife of Edmund L. Frank, a salesman.

Her desire for constant companionship—companionship denied her because of her husband's frequent absences from the city—is responsible for her plight, she pleaded in court.

A jury has told Mrs. Frank that she is guilty of attempted murder—an attempt to slay her husband.

The jury also decided a friend of Mrs. Frank's—Carl B. Davis, erstwhile grocery clerk—was guilty of the same crime.

Each was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Mrs. Frank is free pending an appeal to the higher court.

While waiting for the court to make its decision, Mrs. Frank has turned to prayer for forgiveness and solace. Her prayers are written:

"Each night before I go to bed I bend my knees, I bow my head, I say a prayer to Him above To please enfold me with His love."

It was two years ago when Mrs. Frank became lonely, according to the story told the trial jury. Her husband's travels took him away from home for weeks at a time.

She met Davis, dinner parties, trips to the country, theaters and clandestine meetings followed, according to testimony.

It was not long, the jury was told, until Frank's death was plotted. Two men were approached and asked to commit the murder.

"The goal which seems so hard to find, But which is sought by all mankind; I pray that He above, Will help me find this Goal of Love."

Fate plays odd tricks. One of the men approached was a city detective. He reported to his superior officers.

In the meantime, Frank was unaware of the plot.

One evening, as Mr. and Mrs. Frank were leaving their fashionable home, Mrs. Frank was arrested—charged with the attempted murder of her husband, Police told Frank of the plot.

A short while later, Davis, was arrested.

"Dear God, please make me worthy Of the prayers I say each night. Lead me not into temptation, But set my steps aright."

The trial followed, then conviction. Frank attended every session of the trial.

"I was lonely. I wanted companionship. He was out of town most of the time. That's why..."

Mrs. Frank sobbed when the witness stand. She sobbed when the name of her 5-year-old son, Rexford, was mentioned.

She admitted her infidelity.

"Give me the courage and the power To bear my cross alone. Be with me in my darkest hour; Yet, let me suffer and so atone For all my sins to Thee above."

Mrs. Frank was held in jail during her trial. Following conviction, and that of Davis, and pending Mrs. Frank's appeal for a new trial, she was freed on bail.

It is said she and Frank have become reconciled.

"They are living as a couple on their honeymoon," Mrs. Frank's attorney says.

The son, Rexford, is with them.

"Each night before I go to bed,

I bend my knees, I bow my head, Fervently I pray to be forgiven That I may make my life worth living; Not for just myself alone But for the dear ones of my home."

Farm Notes

CARE OF SEED CORN

While early selection of seed corn from the standing stalk is an excellent practice to insure a high percentage of disease-free seed, further attention to drying and storage is equally necessary.

R. C. Thomas, associate plant pathologist, Ohio Experiment Station, finds that prompt drying of the ears after harvesting prevents the possibility of their becoming diseased later and also stops the growth of any seed destroying parasites which already have gained entrance.

Late selected seed, he says, may be expected to have a higher percentage of disease-infested ears. For this reason he recommends drying as quickly as possible without interruption, employing artificial heat if necessary.

It is also very necessary, especially in the case of late selected ears, that some form of germination test be used before planting for the purpose of detecting the weak and diseased ears. Any ears that show a low percentage of germination or weak plants are discarded.

No form of seed treatment has yet been found which will render diseased seed as good as that which is carefully selected, well cared for, and disease free. Although poor seed can be greatly improved by some forms of treatment, no advantage has been shown in the treatment of disease-free seeds.

ROYALTY TO BUILD
MODERN HOMES ON
SITES OF TENEMENTS

LONDON, Nov. 7.—King George and the Prince of Wales have given an excellent lead to landlords of house properties in great cities.

Both are owners of considerable estates in London which, in places, have fallen into decay and become almost slums, owing to the neglect of sub-landlords. Both, now that the houses are reverting to them under the conditions of leases for a term of years, wish to erect modern buildings instead of the existing dilapidated structures. But both have been met with the difficulty of housing old tenants while re-building takes place.

The difficulty has been met by the erection, on the Prince of Wales' "Duke of Cornwall" estate in South London of the "Old Tenants' House." This has been built particularly for aged women and poor cripples. It suits their needs so well that many will be disinclined to quit.

Imagine a quiet quadrangle with little houses ranged in two stories with balcony entrances giving complete privacy. In most of these the tenants are Darby and Joan couples paying six shillings ($1.50) per week for two rooms, with lighting free. Other old women are paying one dollar a week for a living room with an alcove bedroom. The tenants have complete freedom of action and are treated as though they were owners of the highest-priced apartments in the city.

FORMER DETECTIVE WILL TESTIFY

WITNESS RETURNED AFTER ENLISTMENT WITH MARINE CORPS

Burns Himself Will Be
Questioned In Jury
Scandal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Snatched back from "The Halls of Montezuma," as the service song goes, a former official of the Burns Detective Agency, wearing the uniform of a private in the United States Marine Corps, was brought to Washington today to give all-important testimony to the grand jury that is probing Harry F. Sinclair's alleged efforts to tamper with the Fall-Sinclair oil conspiracy jury.

Also appearing today before the grand jury will be William J. Burns himself.

From the two men, Assistant District Attorney Burkishaw hopes to ascertain who paid the salaries and expenses of the sixteen private detectives who kept a constant surveillance over eleven of the twelve jurors that sat in judgment of Sinclair and former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall.

The marine who will be heard is Douglas S. Catchim, former assistant manager of the local Burns office. He had been told, according to information in the hands of the district attorney's office, that he "would be fixed for life" if he got out of the country and failed to be available for questioning by the grand jury. He enlisted in the marine corps, apparently in the hope of sailing for Haiti on November 1, but his plane went amiss and he was nabbed by a secret service agent. It is thought he has invaluable records in his possession. An armed guard escorted him back to Washington from the naval base at Newport News, Va.

Burns was in town awaiting the call of Burkishaw. He will be questioned about the "flying squad" of agents he sent to Washington to observe the doings of the Fall-Sinclair jury. His son, W. Sherman Burns, was due to have appeared also today, but was kept in New York by illness. It was W. Sherman to whom Charles G. Ruddy, boss of the Washington crew, personally reported.

Burkishaw has sworn out a complaint against Sinclair and one of his lieutenants, H. Mason Day, vice president of the Sinclair Exploration Company, charging them with conspiracy to attempt to illegally influence the petit jury in the Fall-Sinclair trial. Day is out on $25,000 bond and the arrest warrant is being held in abeyance on Sinclair. Today, the young assistant district attorney hopes to ascertain who actually negotiated with Burns for the employment of his agents.

Also waiting to be heard today by the grand jury were three of the Fall-Sinclair jurors. Burkishaw has questioned all of them and has learned that most of them felt they were under surveillance. One in particular has stated that, becoming aware of this, he received an anonymous phone call telling him the shadowy "A" department of justice agent and to "watch your step." Burkishaw declares that no justice agents have ever figured in the case and he is bringing such facts before the grand jury in an effort to show them that the defense was attempting to intimidate the jury by making them feel the government was keeping close watch on them.

TREASURY ISSUES NEW BOND ISSUE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Authorization of a new treasury bond issue of $400,000,000 in seven months, 3 1/8 per cent certificates of indebtedness, was announced today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

The issue dates from Nov. 15 and will be used in the retirement of second Liberty bonds. While the outstanding liberties amount to over $700,000,000, it was believed that not to exceed $400,000,000 would be presented for exchange on Nov. 15.

Another treasury financing will take place December 15.

Interest on the second Liberty issue ceases November 15.

PREDICT DEFEAT OF MARSHALL BILL AS ELECTION NEARING

Only Unusually Large Rural Vote Will
Save Bill, Said

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—With the fight over the Marshall bill attracting the major interest of Ohio voters, finishing touches were being given throughout the state today to the statewide and local campaigns which terminate at the polls Tuesday.

Politicians here today predicted that unless an expected heavy drive is cast in the rural districts in supporting of the measure, the Marshall bill will be defeated by an overwhelming adverse vote in the cities and other urban territory. Predictions were made by these politicians that, if the rural vote is light, the Marshall bill will be defeated by a majority ranging from 25,000 to more than 100,000.

Political experts, also, voiced belief that municipal voters will bring about the defeat of the chlorophyllors' bills, there will be the election of local municipal, township and school district officers.

No state or county officers will be chosen, aside from the county school board members. Proposed bond issues and tax levies, also, will be disposed of in many voting districts throughout the state.

HOME DOCTORS WILL HOLD BANQUET SOON

The annual meeting and banquet of the Medical and Surgical Staff, O. S. and S. O. Home, will be held at the Home, Wednesday, November 16, according to invitations just issued.

Dr. J. E. Griewe, Cincinnati, dean of the faculty, who has just returned from three months tour abroad, will deliver the main address and several other addresses will be heard from prominent physicians from over the state.

Dr. T. F. Myler, resident Home physician, will show the staff members the plans for the new hospital for which an appropriation of $100,000 was made recently.

FARM RESIDENCE IS RAZED SUNDAY WHEN FAMILY IS ABSENT

Contents Completely Destroyed—Estimate Loss
At $15,000

Smoke curling up from the ruins of their beautiful farm home was the sight that greeted Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Faulkner, who live one-half mile off the Valley Pike, seven miles southeast of Xenia, and their daughter, Mrs. Laverne Fulton, Massillon, when they returned from visiting relatives early Sunday evening.

The modern farm residence, with its contents, including all furnishing goods, personal apparel and other property, was destroyed with a loss estimated at $15,000. About half of the damage is covered by insurance. A refrigerator and a kitchen table, constituted all of the property saved from the ruins.

Cause of the conflagration is unknown, although it is believed to have started in the basement. The furnace fire had not been replenished since 8 o'clock in the morning and Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner and Mrs. Fulton left home at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. They spent two hours at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hartsook, Valley Pike, and noticed the smoke from the fire when they started home.

In the meantime Charles Bone, Port William, who was visiting in the neighborhood, discovered the flames and neighboring farmers formed a volunteer crew of firemen. With the aid of an engine from Port William and using chemicals and a large water tank, the volunteers mounted outbuildings and a big straw stack between the house and barn, and saved the stack and all the other buildings. The house was of two story frame and stucco construction, about four or five years old, and entirely modern. It is believed that the house held the flames and smoke until the interior was practically consumed so that by the time the flames were noticeable to neighbors, the interior was completely gutted. Only the foundation remained standing after the blaze.

The loss included everything members of the family did not have with them at the time. Howard Faulkner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner, who was in Xenia at the time, owned $1,000 worth of property which was destroyed in the house besides his clothing. Mrs. Fulton came for a visit with her parents Saturday, and her husband and two friends who accompanied them, had left for Massillon before the fire. Mrs. Fulton lost all of her wearing apparel, except the clothes she had on, and her loss also included a diamond ring, diamond brooch, her watch and her husband's watch, which he had left to be repaired.

Occupants of the tenant house on the farm were absent at the time. They will remove to another tenant house on the farm and the Faulkner family will occupy the tenant house near the burned dwelling for the present. They expect to rebuild the residence destroyed by fire.

FERTILIZER MEN MEET AT ATLANTA

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Seeking a plan to prevent bumper crops from bumping farmers into bankruptcy, the National Fertilizer Association will convene its annual southern convention in Atlanta tomorrow to draft proposals for control of surplus crops, it was announced here today.

Fertilizer manufacturers and agricultural workers from twenty-five states are expected to attend. The convention also will discuss the federal trade commission's policy toward business.

Public offering was made in New York today of $50,000,000 five per cent debentures of the International Match Company, which is affiliated with the Swedish Match Company. The bonds received by the Swedish Match Company were turned over to the International Match Company. The $25,000,000 not offered for sale will be held in the company's treasury.

PARIS, Nov. 7.—The French government will not lose the national match monopoly through the sale of $75,000,000 five per cent bonds to the Swedish Match Company, a high foreign office official informed International News Service today.

This money will be used for refunding the French government's 8 per cent bonds which were sold in the United States.

DRIVEN TO HOUSE TOPS BY FLOODS

New England's disastrous floods have driven folk to the housetops. Here is a Central Press telephoto of a flood scene at Bellows Falls, Vt., where a man on the porch roof of Mrs. Mary Buckley's house surveys the expanse of water while awaiting a rescue boat.

SENATE INSURGENTS TO FAVOR NORRIS MUSCLE SHOALS PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The senate insurgent bloc will support the new Norris plan for government operation of the Muscle Shoals dam as a power project, while opposing all plans for establishing nitrate plants at the power site, it was learned today.

The new plan of Senator George W. Norris (R) of Nebraska, long a foe of proposals to lease the project privately, will involve sale by the government of all power generated at Muscle Shoals and use of the proceeds to construct nitrate plants in other parts of the country, where cheap fuel can be obtained. Norris obtained data, supporting his plan, by visiting the Dupont nitrate plant at Charleston, W. Va., which is operated by coal.

The insurgents now plan to include the Norris proposal in their farm relief program. They were to meet today with other western Republicans, including Senator McNary (R) of Oregon, chairman of the senate agriculture committee, in an effort to reach an agreement on a bill for disposing of surplus crops. This measure will top the farm relief program but the insurgents are determined to fight for enactment of the proposed Norris bill as well.

FLOOD CONTROL MEASURES WILL BE CONSIDERED BY HOUSE BODY

Committee Begins Public Hearings On Important Question—Will Be Costly Problem For Next Congress.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—In consideration of measures to control the nation's raging rivers at flood-tide—one of the costliest jobs ever laid on the doorstep of congress—was begun by the house flood control committee today.

Brushing aside its admitted lack of authority and refusing to wait until congress meets to give it legal existence, the house committee of the last session started its public hearings with determination to lay a plan before the parent body by Christmas.

With a dozen different plans already proposed to end future Mississippi River disasters, Rep. Frank R. Reed, (R) of Illinois, chairman of the committee, declared that the ultimate cost may be anywhere from $250,000,000 to $1,000,000,000. Delegates from every section of the vast Mississippi valley—more than 2,000 in all—poured into the city of the great flood of last spring and to demand that the nation act.

The Chicago flood control conference was given the right-of-way at the beginning of the hearings today, with Mayor Thompson, chairman, leading the conference's corps of engineers, financiers and mere citizens to seek action and propose remedies. The conference established elaborate headquarters in a hotel and prepared to camp until a flood control bill is finally signed by President Coolidge.

Despite the widespread discussion of the Mississippi disaster, there was every evidence as the committee met that flood control would precipitate many stormy sessions of both senate and house. A complete nationwide policy to be undertaken by the federal government without state aid—reversing a policy which has endured for 150 years—already has been accused of being a "pork barrel" plan.

It has also been proposed that the government fix a limit in its efforts to control the Mississippi, a river which menaces 20,000,000 of people and defies all measures of local control. With this plan arises the question of whether the government should also limit its efforts to control tributaries reaching almost to the Canadian border.

The New England floods of rare force have focused attention upon efforts to control "danger spots" throughout the nation. Periodically, the Illinois, the Ohio, the Tennessee, the Sacramento and other rivers have destroyed millions of dollars worth of property and taken hundreds of lives. The story of the great Dayton flood is expected to be retold to the committee.

The report of the army engineers will not be presented until December 1. It is expected to contain flood control proposals which bear the stamp of approval of President Coolidge, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and Secretary of War Davis.

Freighter is freed

CLEVELAND, Nov. 7.—After narrowly escaping being pounded to pieces against the breakwater at Fairport Harbor on Lake Erie, just east of Cleveland, the freighter John A. Kling, carrying a crew of twenty-six, was freed from the sandy shallows last night. The coast guard was preparing to rescue the crew when the vessel was re-floated.

ESTIMATE 125 DEAD AFTER HIGH WATERS IN EASTERN STATES

Snow Adds To Perils Of Stricken New England— Food Being Rationed To Sufferers— Relief Work Rushed

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 7.—The mad floods of upper New England have passed—but as they moved southward east to the sea today, Connecticut, already lashed by advancing freshets, was due to feel the crest of the mighty wall of water which has wreaked such havoc in other New England states.

Behind the waters today is a mounting list of dead, not estimated at 125 and a hundred million dollars in wreckage. Snow has come bringing new peril of the elements to the northern valleys where manpower is being conscripted to rehabilitate the devastated regions and to the hills where countless thousands, unsheltered seek safety from the raging waters.

Food supplies in Vermont, home state of the president, and with all are running low.

By edict of Governor Weeks and committees appointed to conserve rations until roads have been patched up and new supplies arrive of half a loaf of bread a day is allowed for each person.

A summary of the flood toll in New England shows:

Vermont—More than half the state flood swept, at least 125 dead, 50,000 homeless, with freshets subsiding and work of rebuilding begun.

Massachusetts—Untold millions in property damage, one town completely wiped out, 10,000 homeless as crest of Connecticut River flood passes through Springfield.

Connecticut—Already battered by damage of millions in first onslaughts of freshets, menaced crest of flood rushing down Connecticut River.

New Hampshire—Towns buried beneath water landslides and normal as Blackstone and other rivers subside after causing great damage.

Maine—Swept by gales as floods, nearly back to normal. All of the western and northern part of New England is still clogged in lines of communication. Railroad telegraph and telephone service is barely able to handle messages. Rail damage reaches $25,000,000 and in many places will not be restored weeks, while it will never be stored in other districts. At another $15,000,000 damage has been done to highways.

An air line, with a base at Concord, N. H., has been established to rush sugar, yeast and salt, most urgently needed supplies to stricken towns.

The first plane made its way to Montpelier, center of the wrecked area yesterday, piloted by an army flier. Governor Wood sent out word to the army base in Vermont believed it can draw self back to normalcy without side help except for labor.

Barre, Waterbury, Bolton, 10 and other towns on the Connecticut River, which runs from Montpelier to Lake Champlain, received the most savagely the sweep of the torments.

Barre has twenty-six killed, Waterbury twenty-five, ten seventeen and Richmond while state highway report p the Bolton dead at thirty-six, reported a logging camp bunk with eighteen men swept into freshets.

Many smaller towns and villages have not been heard from. Army fliers, newspapermen sightseers flying over the disaster still inundated reported the itants at work clearing wreckage and attempting to fish communications. Lieut. T. D. Concorde from Concord, N. H., reported that between Bolton and Bethel a great lake in extent, had been formed by flood and that he observed a stalled in the middle of it. I low he saw scores of men, women and children, lying on the seats. They had been there at sixty hours without food or sleep and word was sent Major G. Preston Brown, commanding the in the district to send relief.

Boston, cut off from its milk supply faces famine. Less than per cent of its normal consumption has arrived here. Retail dealers offered high prices for yesterday, but had no milk for at any price. The big dealers so far have taken care of family trade. The Boston & Railroad has given milk right of way over everything the first relief train of six milk arrived here last night.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—request of Gov. Weeks of Vermont, President Coolidge today at the retention of one regular army troops in the area around Burlington, Vt. will be kept there until the agency passes.

En route to the church twelve automobiles loaded with floral pieces estimated to have cost $100,000 led the cortege. Thirty girls, friends of the "black bird" clad in gray from head to foot, and bearing flowers in their hands preceded the hearse.

In the mass of flowers were contributions from representatives of the stage, screen, boxing ring and society. The largest piece, an immense offering in the shape of "Gates Ajar" attested the sympathy of Harry Wills, the former heavyweight champion of his race.

"Bleeding Heart" was the offering that U. S. Thompson, husband of Miss Mills laid upon her bier.

He charged that the government sold two billion dollars worth of road building machinery acquired during the war to France for $150,000,000. And France, in turn, sold much of it to some of our states for 100 cents on the dollar.

George M. Graham of Toledo, representing the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, asserted that if the auto industry was selfish it would demand reduction of the corporation income tax rate alone, since the public pays the auto tax.

open, there have been remarkable cases of rejuvenation reported. It is pointed out that the average man or woman at the age of forty-five is full of poison. O. H. S. A. A. WILL NOT SANCTION COURT TOURNEY FOR GIRLS

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—Though there are 440 high schools in Ohio having girls' basketball teams there will be no general inter-scholastic basketball tournament for girls this year according to an announcement made by the Ohio High School Athletic Association here.

Miss Lydia Clark, for several years director of Women's athletics at Ohio State University, when asked her opinion on the matter said "I fully agree with the Ohio High School Athletic Association in not sanctioning inter-scholastic basketball for girls in our high schools of the state. Girls' basketball should never be played only under girls' rules, and because these rules are broken so often, competition among different schools in the sport should never be allowed. Properly trained women should coach and referee all basketball games in which girls are playing."

Her opinion is almost identical with the view given by H. A. Townsend, commissioner of the Ohio High School athletics. Townsend pointed out a ruling made by the Board of Control of the Association when they voted not to sanction inter-scholastic basketball tournaments. Two years ago the board recommended that all girls' basketball be played under girls' standard rules and that as far as possible the coaches for the teams should be women.

Statistics compiled by the association show that the recommendation met with some disfavor. Nearly a third of the high schools in the state are not in favor of playing basketball in accordance with girls' standard.

Some demand a modification of the rules, others that boys' standard rules should be used. Boys' rules, however, were advocated by only nine schools. The records show too, that of the number of schools that have girls' basketball teams listed with the Association 154 of the teams are coached by men. This is undoubtedly due to the lack of properly trained and athletic women "who understand the game," in the smaller rural communities.

The strain that girls undergo when they participate in a general tournament, the atmosphere surrounding such tournaments, and the problems of proper chaperoning are the three great factors that make inter-scholastic basketball tournaments prohibitive for the moral and physical welfare of our girls, Townsend declared.

A Menace To Public Health

TEN REASONS WHY FOR YOUR OWN PROTECTION, AND FOR THE PROTECTION OF PUBLIC HEALTH YOU SHOULD VOTE "NO" ON THE INITIATED CHIROPRACTORS BILL

- 1 All reasonably competent chiropractors can now secure licenses by taking examinations and complying with lawful requirements. (Over 135 have been licensed in the past three years.)
- 2 The Licensed Chiropractors Society of the State of Ohio is opposed to this bill, and is actively working against its passage. The initiative is promoted by "advertising specialists" and UNLICENSED chiropractors.
- 3 The health of the public is best protected by one licensing board.
- 4 There are many other limited practitioners. If the chiropractors are granted a special board, the others are equally entitled to them. With such multiplication the state would soon lose control of the public health situation.
- 5 The most serious damage would come from licensing limited practitioners to treat, with impunity, infectious contagious and venereal diseases which they are not trained to recognize; and permit the filing of causes of death by those who have no knowledge or means of ascertaining such causes.
- 6 The enactment of the chiropractic proposal would make the morbidity and mortality statistics of the Department of Health valueless.
- 7 There should be no multiplication of licensing boards for limited practitioners, nor should the present licensing system be submerged in any plan awarding special privilege.
- 8 The constitutionality of the Medical Practices Act of Ohio has been sustained and the act has been commended as adequate by the highest courts of the land.
- 9 If there should be any modification of the educational standards of those who treat the sick it should be to raise and not lower the requirements.
- 10 The initiated proposal is burdened with so many dangerous possibilities, with so many inconsistencies, and it would raise so many legal and constitutional questions, that it would be extremely unsafe to enact it even in any amended form.

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

Drink Plenty Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithia and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so there are no longer a source of irritation thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

CLUB MEMBERS FROM GREENE COUNTY AT COLUMBUS MEETING

Congress of Ohio farm boys and girls, an event better known as the thirteenth annual Club Week for 4-H Club members, convened in Columbus November 7 to 12 with an attendance of close to 500 delegates from eighty-one of Ohio's eighty-eight counties.

Those receiving the trip from Greene County are as follows: Mary Eleanor Ford, Xenia Township; Helen Edgington, Sugar Creek Township; Opal Elliott, Ross Township; Nelson Moore, Xenia Township; George McHenry, Sugar Creek Township; Robert Smith, Jefferson Township.

Farm boys and girls attending this congress as guests of the Ohio State University represent the 28,000 members of 4-H clubs in Ohio this year. Delegates for the Columbus trip were chosen on nomination of club leaders and after examination of their records in raising a pig or calf, learning to sew or to bake, or whatever their project may have been.

As arranged by the state 4-H Club leaders, representing the agricultural college extension service at the university, the program lists talks by Governor Donahoe, Judge Florence Allen, Gertrude Warren of the United States Department of Agriculture, and members of the university staff. Travelogues are an important part of the program.

Informal talks by the youngsters themselves will figure as important as talks by adults. Each day of the week there is scheduled a series of group discussions in which club delegates will talk over 4-H Club problems, detect the weaknesses of Club projects and suggest ways to fortify them. Recreation and sight-seeing in Columbus will also play a part in the week's activities.

XENIA CHURCHES TO SUPPORT SEAL SALE

Matters pertaining to the church welfare of Xenia and community were taken up by Xenia Ministerial Association, at the Presbyterian Church, Monday morning. The association agreed to support the anti-tuberculosis association in the Christmas Seal sale.

The Rev. William H. Tilford was appointed to preach the Thanksgiving Day sermon, at 10 a. m. at the First U. P. Church. A committee was appointed to arrange a Week of Prayer, beginning Sunday, January 1, and continuing through January 8, with a union service each night except Saturday.

The following committee will be in charge: Dr. W. N. Shank, chairman; the Rev. A. J. Furstenberger and the Rev. R. S. Burkett. The proposal was made that all church people read Matthew and John during the two months, January and February, pamphlets to be distributed to all the church families of Xenia.

UNION SERVICES OPENED AT CHURCH

The combined evening services, being held Sunday evenings by the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches, opened Sunday night with a good attendance, when the Rev. D. A. Sellers preached on the

REGAIN CHILDHOOD'S STURDY DIGESTION

How You can Safely Eat whatever You Fancy

Do you remember the school days long ago when your appetite was good and you could "eat anything"? Perhaps you yearn for a digestion like that now? You can have it, and easily too! Most digestive trouble is due to excess stomach acid which ferments the food and causes painful gases to dilate your stomach. Obviously you can only end indigestion and stomach pain by ridding yourself this root cause, acidity.

The quickest, surest and safest way to do this is to take a little "Pape's Diapiesin" after eating or when pain is felt. This brings prompt relief because it instantly neutralizes the excess acid in your stomach and then soothes, heals and strengthens the acid-weakened tissues.

"Pape's Diapiesin" is of such great value in the treatment of digestive troubles that millions everywhere use and recommend it. Don't delay—get a 60-cent package of "Pape's Diapiesin" from your druggist today. It will give you instant relief, so that instead of suffering after each meal you will always enjoy healthy, carefree digestion.—Adv.

Gospel of Mark, "Are We Following Christ?"

He reviewed the life of John Mark and pointed out the way of following Christ from the examples drawn from the varied life of this writer of the second gospel. He appealed to all present to continue to follow Christ into avenues of service.

Miss Zella Soward sang a solo. The sermon was preceded by a song service, the song books used being the same as in the recent Biederwulf campaign.

The next service will be at the Reformed Church and the Rev. Mr. Tilford will preach, answering the question: "Are We In Need of Christ?"

PRACTICAL JOKE OR GRUESOME PLOT IS PUZZLING

Dr. Frank M. Chambliss, coronator, and residents of Bellbrook concluded Sunday they were victims of a practical joke but so far have been unable to find the "point."

A youth peering, Sunday afternoon into the window of the residence of Mrs. Della Hopkins which had been unoccupied for several weeks as the owner was away, saw what was to all intents and purposes, a body lying on a bed.

The boy raised an alarm and Dr. Chambliss, notified of the case, hurried to the village. All doors were locked and finally a door was forced open.

Throwing back the covers on the bed, the townspeople discovered a dummy head had been rigged up, covered with a false face. The head was wax or plaster of paris and weighed about nine pounds. A fur piece was around the neck and clothes were scattered about to complete the deception.

Coroner Chambliss was seeking solution of the mystery Monday. The residence had not been occupied for several weeks and villagers could give no explanation of the incident.

HENRY FORD'S CASH WOULD WEIGH 2,000 TONS SOMEONE SAYS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Henry Ford's wealth, if converted into gold, would weigh 2,000 tons and take as many of his own trucks to haul it around—assuming that the flivver king is worth a billion dollars.

Figures obtained from Frank White, treasurer of the United States, today showed that America's money gold supply, on the scales, would equal 9,000 tons. World gold stocks are almost double that weight.

There is more gold in the New York assay office than any other one spot in the world—an average of $2,000,000,000 or about 4,000 tons, according to White.

Out of the country's total gold coin and bullion of $4,581,000,000, the treasury is in possession of $3,639,000,000. For every dollar of paper money there must be an equal amount of gold or silver in the treasury vaults, but at present, owing to the great inward movement of gold to United States since the war, the ratio is considerably higher.

The New York Federal Reserve Bank—probably the most solidly backed financial institution in the world—has a gold reserve of $1,024,513,000 far exceeding that of most nations. Only a nominal amount of actual gold, however, is maintained at the bank, its reserve being made up to a considerable extent of gold certificates, the physical backing being in the treasury.

High American exchange rates, the favorable balance of merchandise trade, income on foreign investments and proceeds on war loans extensive counter movement results from loans abroad, immigrant and tourist expenditures and America's vast buying overseas. Total money circulation at the annual holiday orgy of spending starts is approximately $4,850,000,000. That represents about one-twenty-second of the national income. In other words every dollar outside the treasury is "turned over" about twenty-two times every year.

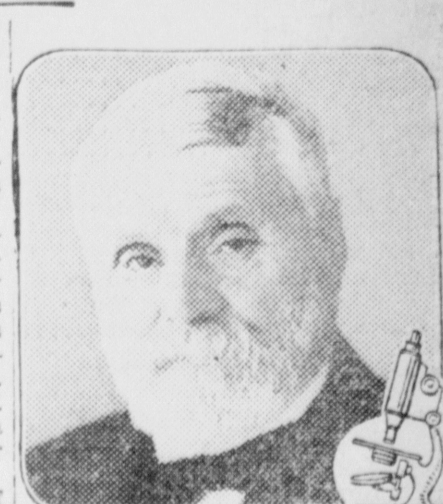

Doctor at 83 Finds People Still Prefer His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with

The information that telephone communication has been opened between the United States and several Mexican cities, following upon the recent completion of telephone communication between the United States, Great Britain and other European points is of the utmost importance. It heralds a day, probably closer than most of us realize, when world distances will be conquered and the limitations of space done away with.

Bell talked to a man in the next room, and the world rose in homage to the achievement. Soon people in large cities could talk with their neighbors, then lines were strung from one locality to another, culminating in the trans-continental service we are all used to. And now it is trans-oceanic. There is a great romance and a great achievement in the story of the American telephone, and recent developments show that the system keeps one jump ahead of the times as it always has. A new age of international understanding, a new intimacy of nations, is in the making.

IMPROVED SERVICE

The electric railway industry during the past few years has endeavored to give better service. It recognized that it was to live and prosper it was necessary to renovate its viewpoint and adopt new methods and procedures. It has added new and modern equipment, has paid more attention to its personnel, has given the public more information as to its needs and necessities, and has endeavored to render service under trying circumstances in a gracious and attentive way.

It has steadfastly maintained that it is rendering a necessary service to the people, and its efforts at salesmanship during the past few years have been noteworthy; with the result that in many instances much good has accrued, not only to the industry but to the people as well.

ALWAYS DESTROYING

H. L. Mencken, foremost critic of America and its people, has no constructive ideas by which he may build up after he destroys, declares Upton Sinclair in "The Bookman."

According to Mr. Sinclair, "The darling and idol of the young intelligencia has no message to give them, except that they are free to do what they please. Mencken," he says, "has 'made his school,' as the French say; he has raised up a host of young persons as clever as their master, and able to write with the same shillelah swing.

"Mencken is in a Berserk rage against stupidity, dullness, and sham. If you ask Mencken what is the remedy for these horrors, he will tell you they are the natural and inevitable manifestations of the boobus Americanus. If you ask him why then labor so monstrously, he will say that it is for his own enjoyment. But watch him awhile, and you will see the light of hilarity die out of his eyes, and you will note lines of tiredness in his face, and lines of not quite perfect health, and you will realize that he is lying to himself and to you; he is a new-style crusader, a Christian Anti-Christ, a tireless propagandist of no-propaganda.

"For the present, that is all that is required; that is the mood of time, cynicism, ridicule, and contempt for democratic bungling. But some day the time spirit will change; America will realize that its problems really have to be solved, and that will take serious study of exploitation and wage slavery, of co-operation and the democratic control of industry—matters concerning which Mencken is as ignorant as any Babbittboob. Sooner or later my friend Mencken will have to face these new facts, and choose between the bloody reaction of Fascism and the new dawn of industrial brotherhood."

The Way of the World

THE LESSON

If youth, with all its progressiveness and buoyancy, could only learn one great lesson that comes with advancing years, so much disillusionment and unhappiness would be prevented. If youth could only learn, while it is still youth, that there are certain fundamental things which it can not do and "get away with," certain things that must be done and must not be done, certain things that are not only conventional but essential, half the tears of boyhood and girlhood would never flow.

PATIENCE

Dr. Paul Straussman, great Berlin doctor now visiting in America, is amazed by some things in the United States. He finds we have imagination reflected in great buildings, and he is impressed by the life and speed of our cities. He is interested in prohibition. He says: "Perhaps prohibition will be a success in one, two, or maybe three generations, but not yet. You can't change a country's habits in one year or five."

Dr. Straussman might have added that a nation doesn't change its habits entirely in a generation. Just because prohibition is a new and difficult idea is no reason that the experiment will not in the end prove successful. Anything that is right in principle will endure. It takes patience.

GOING, NOT COMING

Not so much talk about immigration as there was a few years ago. The law, sensational at the time, which reduces the number of foreigners coming to our shores to a handful, is still in operation. The facts are astonishing. Since 1924 approximately three times as many common laborers have returned to Europe as have come to this country. The effect of the law has doubtless been to raise the standard of living in the United States. Americans expect and get higher wages than foreigners. And they spend more freely.

The Daybook

OF A

New Yorker

By
Burton Rascoe

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Illustrative of the remarkable tolerance of New York and of New Yorkers, I offer the following. A gentleman clad in a long black frock coat which had seen the peak of its career long before, and clad also in a wiry beard of generous proportions, to say nothing of a head of hair like an animal, which might have been the envy of Samson, walks through City Hall park. He is hatless and it is chilly. From the rear, he looks like an animated mattress, which overflows at the top. And yet no one disturbs him; indeed, only a few give him a second glance.

Again, a very pretty young man walks down Eighth avenue—not Fifth but Eighth, mind you! He is either wearing rouge or he has a high fever and it does not appear from his jaunty stride, that he is sick. His attire is faultless—striped trousers, morning coat, and top hat. Also spats. In his hand is a rose, which, as he proceeds, he wafts poetically and daintily back and forth under his lovely nose. And, alas for the effeminate subway workers, they say not a word. Yet in the most of American cities, men have been and are being shot for less than this!

I remember a young man who told me that he was forced to give up a hike from Chicago to New York because his clothing did not please residents along his route. In every small town, the youth of the place were unanimously of the opinion that only ripe tomatoes were suitable as missiles against one who wore plus fours. And in the hard-boiled steel towns of Indiana, my friend gave up. There the sons of toil, indicated their disapproval of his knickers with paying bricks and BB guns.

It would be interesting to learn just how much provocation a New Yorker needs to cause him to utter a loud and scornful sneer.

Among current sidewalk attractions are: the chef in the window of the Rotisserie restaurant on upper Broadway; the sidewalk vendor, mouth the Tango palace, where large crowds gather nightly to listen to the music of jazz band within; the lizzie disguised as a locomotive which puffs steam from a radiator-smoke stack, as it wanders around the theatrical district in search of alms for the disabled veteran who operates it; the demonstration of a new out in a window near the Capitol in which those outside can start the car within by pressing on a marked spot on the window. The car runs up and down a short track.

Add new kinds of stunt advertising. Walking up Broadway last night crowds were staring at an elderly gentleman in a faultless evening dress, who was sauntering along. He was a most distinguished looking man, bearing mustache and goatee. He might have been a visiting ambassador. But he obviously was not, since, through the transparent surface of his starched breast, a red electric sign regularly flashed the legend: "FOR STARCHES, THEY'RE MELLOW!"

KELLYGRAMS
by Fred C. Kelly

Questions People Ask
If an all-wise power should agree to answer any questions people might ask, the chances are that most of the queries would be unimportant. We humans seem to have a predisposition for getting interested in all manner of inconsequential topics.

Managers of information bureaus conducted by various newspapers have long marveled at the range of trivial things people wish to know—such questions as the height of the Woolworth building, the number of times a famous actress has been married, or the average weight of mules. Questions that do not matter are asked over and over.

"Nothing, in my opinion," I heard a great banker remark, "inures a man's credit rating more than having a reputation as a liar. Every banker is gun-shy of liars. We had a certain man come in on our bank one day seeking a loan, and his account promised to be of such consequence that he appeared to be well worth while as a customer. He submitted a proposition which investigation proved to contain several ingeniously hidden bits of misrepresentation. These were brought to his attention, and he promptly agreed to remedy any defects in the proposed negotiation. But we did not enter into any deal with him. We did not wish to have him as a customer. You see, he had tried to fool us and failed that time, but sooner or later he would succeed in fooling us."

The practice followed by young movie addicts, and others, of adding oil to their hair to give themselves a fashionable eel-like appearance, is a great boon to hat manufacturers. The hair oil soaks through the sweat band and discolors the hat. An enterprising hat manufacturer could almost afford to pay a liberal bonus to all barbers who talk their customers into using hair tonics.

One of the most successful real estate operators in the United States once told me: "Give me fifty families of the right sort who will agree to live in a new locality, and there will be no trouble getting plenty more to live there. People who are wholesome, orderly, pay their bills promptly, like artists' homes and well-kept lawns, will always attract others."

Not All The Miracles Are Confined to The New Testament

I Have Said in My Heart

By IDAH MCGLONE GIBSON
ENTHUSIASM
One sometimes wonders which attains the most—the woman of enthusiasm or the woman of poise.

The woman of enthusiasm can always work herself up to great heights. If she is allowed to follow the line of her ambition, she will strain every nerve, put every ounce of energy into the undertaking, labor early and late to put it through, but if she is apt to make those about her quite as unhappy as she is.

The woman of poise is always very agreeable to meet. She is a reasonable creature, sane and understanding; but she seldom gets very much excited over anything or anybody. She is the kind of woman who rarely makes a mistake; indeed, her correctitude often makes you feel childish. She is not apt to tire you. You are quieted and made comfortable in her presence, but unless you have a brain of uncommon, almost brittle, brilliancy, you are apt to become stagnated if you come in contact with her often.

I have never known but one woman of great poise whom I admired greatly. This is Annie Besant of the Theosophical Society. She lives now, as you know, in India, where she is an incalculable influence over that sporadic people. Whether she would be able to exert that same influence over a people of different temperament from those where she has elected to live, one does not know.

I would rather have followed the banner of a Theodore Roosevelt, splendid even in his mistakes, honest in his endeavor, enthusiastic always—the other, logical, with a mind of mathematical legality, always weighing with judicial temperament his actions as well as yours, one who may choose the same way but never the adventurous one.

The enthusiastic person, after all, is the person who does things. If Columbus had not had great enthusiasm he would not have been the discoverer of the new world. It is only the enthusiasts who have lifted the world. It is only the enthusiasts who will fight for an idea; it is only the enthusiasts who are able to sell their ideas to the phlegmatic and unthinking.

Markus Aurelius was the great exemplification of poise, of sanity, of the reasonable thinking of his day. Only the cultured few know about him today.

Jesus Christ was the greatest enthusiast the world has ever known—and all Christianity bows at the shrines erected in His name.

Poise is a very wonderful, beautiful thing, and yet it almost seems at times that it is rather a selfish attitude to take. It virtually says: "Who are you that may disturb the dreams of my soul?"

To most people the enthusiasts, even when they are mistaken, are much more interesting than those who pride themselves upon their great calmness in the face of all impulse and all disaster, for it is the enthusiasts that really live.

Memo: It is the enthusiast who drives this old world forward; and the people of poise who hold it in the right direction.

WHAT YOUR WEIGHT SHOULD BE
A woman 40 the same height should weigh a little better than 140.

Then take the tall girl, say five feet, nine inches. At 19 she should weigh 138 pounds but when she gets to be 50, she should have 165 pounds to her credit, which, by the way, happens to be the minimum set by many of our colleges for their football players.

Now for determining your height. Stand in your shoes against a wall or the edge of an open door very erect but without allowing yourself to curve in at the middle of the back. Press a rod or ruler down against your scalp, step out from under it and measure up from the floor. If you are wearing sensible heels, subtract one inch, if high French ones, two inches.

When you weigh yourself, subtract three to five pounds for clothing, depending upon the season of the year.

A quick way to estimate what your weight should be is to multiply the number of inches over five feet in height by 5½ and add that to 110. If you are under five feet, multiply the number of inches by 5½ and subtract the result from 110. This will give the approximate normal weight for a woman over thirty. A younger woman who is not fully developed will naturally weigh less. For absolute accuracy it is best to get a reliable weight scale for women based on both age and height.

Now that I have given you a basis for finding out whether you are too fat or too thin, I shall, in my next talks, give practical advice on how to bring your weight to normal. My talk tomorrow will be on "Diets that Reduce to Beauty Proportions."

MENU HINT

Want a menu for a "company" dinner? How is this for a change? Its preparation will not tax the housewife too much and I am sure the food will please any guest unless he or she be on a diet.

Olives Mint Grapefruit Celery
Baked Stuffed Pork Chops
Baked Potatoes Health Salad
Creamed Butter Beans
French Bread Lemon Fluff Tea
Coffee

Today's Recipes.

Mint Grapefruit — Core grapefruit, remove skin between sections and sprinkle with crushed after-dinner mints. Place a green cherry in the center and a sprig of mint on the serving plate.

Stuffed Pork Chops—Have the butcher cut double chops and cut a deep opening for the dressing. Make a dressing of one-fourth pound sausage meat, one egg, one-fourth cup bread crumbs, dash of celery salt. Pack this into the opening in the chops, and fasten together with three toothpicks. Dip the chops in flour, brown on top of stove, and then bake in a moderate oven for an hour.

Health Salad—Shred one-half head cabbage, outer stalks bunch of celery, one-half small green pepper, one grated carrot. Serve on crisp lettuce leaves with French dressing.

Lemon Fluff Tarts—Bake pastry shells in deep muffin tins. Filling: Two eggs, one-half cup sugar, two tablespoons lemon juice, two teaspoons gelatin, three Tablespoons cold water. Place egg yolks, half the sugar and lemon juice in top of double boiler. Beat hard, and when thoroughly blended, add gelatin (previously dissolved in cold water) and remainder of sugar. Continue to beat until mixture begins to thicken. Remove from fire and stir into the stiffly beaten whites. When cooled, pour into pastry shells, and just before serving, top with whipped cream. This amount makes three generous tarts, and twice this amount makes one good-sized pie.

MINT CUP—FOR FIRST COURSE AT DINNER

(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Teemed Recipe)
Cut two grapefruits in halves and remove the pulp; add one pint pineapple (canned or fresh) cut in small pieces; one-half pound white grapes, halved and seeded; pulp of three oranges; add a little sugar if sour, and just before serving sprinkle chopped mint leaves over mixture. Serve very cold in frappe glasses with maraschino cherry on top.

Fascinated

"You have acted very wrongly." Thus Horace's father, in the presence of Horace's mother, discovered in the act of stealing jam. "It may seem a small offense, Horace," he continued, "but it has for its foundations one of the prime causes of the world's unhappiness—disobedience. I am more than angry. I am grieved. I want my son to grow up a fine, strong, honorable man. I want him—Here he paused for breath. Little Horace turned enthusiastically to his mother: 'Mamma,' he cried, 'Isn't papa interesting?'"

Behind The Scenes
In Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

SENATORSHIP MAY BE PINCHOT'S AMBITION

By CHARLES P. STEWART
WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—Gifford Pinchot has just given the tip, through a Washington newspaper, at he shouldn't be forgotten when Republican presidential possibilities are being listed.

That is to say, he gave an interview to Judson C. Welliver, former White House chief clerk, who recently returned to capitalism, and Jud supplemented it with the information that ex-Gov. Pinchot's name is mentioned in connection with the presidency—which is true, too, now that Jud's mentioned it.

Giff has been living in Washington since he retired from the Pennsylvania governorship, but many people live in Washington whose political residences are elsewhere. Giff's spiritual—or, shall we say, candidatorial—home is in Philadelphia.

Pennsylvania is a somewhat scrambled state for a Republican presidential candidate to hail from. It's Republican enough, good-natured enough—but is that an advantage? Why should a party waste a presidential nomination on a state that's dead sure to give said party's ticket a big majority anyway?—with doubtful states hanging in the balance.

Besides, the Keystone State's afflicted with a political scandal or two, which the choice of one of its "favorite sons" for such high national office, would only serve to emphasize.

Nevertheless, Jud's nomination of ex-Gov. Pinchot for the presidency is interesting, in its way, whatever may prove to be its ultimate importance—and motive.

On his own individual account, Judson Churchill Welliver is a person of considerable consequence.

He was political expert in the capital for the late Frank Munsey, when the latter was a factor in journalism, as well as in the chain grocery business. He was publicist for the Harding campaign, graduating thence into the White House chief clerkship, where he was credited with the authorship of several highly significant executive utterances, extending on to the Coolidge regime.

Then we find him in New York, as head of the Petroleum Institute devoted to the welfare of our national oil interests—and finally, after a brief journalism interlude in Pittsburgh, back in the Washington newspaper field again.

From this summary, we might infer that Jud was a conservative—which G. Pinchot assuredly isn't. Not necessarily, however.

Originally Jud came from the Corn Belt—as thoroughly saturated with its philosophy as the next man.

He's recalled by old-timers as one of the "white-haired boys" of the era of President Roosevelt—and don't let's forget that nobody was thicker with Col. Roosevelt than Chief Forester Pinchot, who furnished Jud with that recent interview, on the subject of conservation. It has the ring of two decades ago.

Jud isn't the chap to miscalculate that Pennsylvania's a good taking-off state for the presidency just now, but there may be a senatorial vacancy available there—maybe two.

David A. Reed's term expires in 1926 and there's no certainty that William S. Vare will be seated next year.

It doesn't hurt a senatorial candidate to be regarded by the voters of his state as having been a "near thing" for the presidency.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

The Happy Marriage

What are the requisites for a happy marriage, I wonder? One of my readers writes in and tells just what they are, in her estimation. And I'm wondering what the rest of you think. Here is her letter:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I notice the title of your column is 'Living and Loving.' I have not seen any letters from any one in reference to it. Living and Loving is too many of our young people is nonsensical. What would you think of two birds starting housekeeping without a nest?"

"I would suggest to 'Reader' to sit on her lover's lap, but before doing so provide herself with paper and pencil, tell him she has $500 in cash or a hope chest of that value. Now ask him how much he has saved. If he has less than $1,000 and an automobile she had better get off his lap and tell him there is nothing doing until he gets his $1,000. Any young man who has $1,000 and an automobile and whose best girl has $500 may enter into a happy marriage under certain conditions. First they should buy a home.

"The young man should have steady employment, getting more than $100 a month. All pay envelopes should be opened when both are present. The balance after expenses are paid should be deposited in the bank to the credit of both. They were pronounced one and there should be no difficulty in their acting as a unit. TITANIA.

I did not have room for all your letter, Titania. And, by the way, what a fairytale name you choose for such a practical person. Might I point out that birds do their courting first with no more capital than their own skill in nest building. Your plan would be all right—if it does sound a bit cold-blooded—but nature does not mate men and women like that. She is incurably venturesome and experimental and seldom has good financial reasons for making a match. And after all, living and loving are inseparable, are they not? We really live only as we love, whether we love wisely or not.

Here's a word of cheer and advice to the girls and boys who are suffering from love sickness:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I would like to say a few words to the girls of 16 and 17 who think they are so madly in love. I know all about it, girls, because when I was 16 I was so very much in love that when my mother pleaded with me to give him up, I said, 'How can I? It will break my heart.' But I did give him up and my heart never broke. It was not very long before I saw what a bad mess I would have made of my life if I had not listened to mother. Oh, my dears, mothers know best. I am 24 now and have been married a whole year to the most wonderful of husbands. Girls, when you are selecting yourself on your wedding day you are either making your future or wrecking it. If you can stand and look straight into your mother's eyes and read approval you are on the right road to happiness. Thank you, dear Virginia Lee. A HAPPY WIFE."

Peter's Adventures

By Mrs. Florence Smith Vincent.

No Use for Her Umbrella
Peter had never been more amazed in his life.

"Gee whiz! How can you snap your wings together like that, Mrs. Flittermouse? Are they wired?"

"No, boned!" answered the impolite sister, promptly. "Nothing strange about that, is there? You have bones in your own hands, if there is one thing I hate 'tis the heat of the noontime sun. When the twilight comes again and all is clear, I leave the shelter for the fields and forest. All this can be nothing to you, however. Why are you so interested in a Bat's business? For no good reason, I'll warrant! You'll find no more from me!"

"No reason in the world, but I should think they would crack when you brought them together so," replied the boy, thoughtfully. "A bird's wings are covered with feathers and he closes them up like a fan and slowly—not with a jerk as do you. He may have bones in his wings; I have never heard! But if he has, the feather makes a soft padding for them."

"Stuff and nonsense! Skin is as good as feathers! Who wants to be a bird? Certainly not Bat!" Peter was thinking so deeply that he did not notice how cross Mrs. Flittermouse Second was growing. Now he chuckled.

"What are you laughing at, young Two-Legs?" demanded the impolite sister, sharply.

"I am not laughing," answered the boy. "I was only thinking that there is not much use in carrying an umbrella about with you if you can't get under it when it rains. And your wings are only umbrellas when they are closed up. But perhaps in a storm you open them wide and hold them spread over your head and keep under cover that way."

"I do nothing of the sort!" The impolite sister shook her head, and if Peter had been on his guard, he would have noticed Mrs. Flitter-

mouse Second was growing madder by the minute. "Long before raindrops fall I find a cool spot—a church tower, perch, or a sheltering cave—and there I hide until the moon or the stars come out. And if the rain lasts all night long, there all right long I stay, and all the next day, too, for if there is one thing I hate 'tis the heat of the noontime sun. When the twilight comes again and all is clear, I leave the shelter for the fields and forest. All this can be nothing to you, however. Why are you so interested in a Bat's business? For no good reason, I'll warrant! You'll find no more from me!"

Xenia Merchants Lose First Game On Sunday

BUCKINGHAMS SHOW STRONG ATTACK BUT WERE FORCED HARD

Xenia Team Performs Ably For First Game Of Season

Playing their initial game of the season, the Xenia Merchants were defeated by the Buckingham Club of Dayton, 9 to 0 Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

Dayton's first score came early in the first period when Captain Zimmerer, right end, booted a field goal from the twenty-five yard line.

Dayton registered the only touchdown of the contest in the fourth quarter in the last minute of play. Time and again the visitors had rushed the ball to inside Xenia's ten-yard line only to lose possession on fumbles. Finally, Steiner returned a punt to Xenia's ten and Ackerman plunged off left tackle for the score. Zimmerer's kick for goal was wide.

In the first period an intercepted pass on Xenia's forty-yard line paved the way for the field goal. The visitors marched to the fifteen-yard line where the Merchants braced and held. On the fourth down, Zimmerer stepped back and place-kicked a perfect goal.

The Buckingham registered nine first downs during the contest, using straight football methods. Xenia made four first downs, due largely to forward passes. Dayton attempted only three forwards and all were incomplete.

Of six passes attempted, Xenia completed two for a net gain of fifty-five yards. Three were grounded and one was intercepted.

Dayton tried two place kicks for field goals in the first half but both were wide of the mark.

The Buckingham have won six games and lost only one this season. The Merchants suffered from lack of practice while the line was also weak and yielded to assaults.

Zimmerer and Daum scintillated for Dayton while "Bull Dog" Smith, Towles and L. Purdom were outstanding in the Xenia lineup. Towles furnished two sensational runs, one for twenty yards and a second good for thirty yards. He was also on the receiving end of a pass which netted forty yards.

Merchants crossed the Dayton eleven on this occasion as the ball was on Xenia's twenty-yard line, fourth down and fourteen yards to go for first down.

MAYOR'S COURT

FINE IMPOSED

Charged with possessing liquor, Luther Larry, 22, colored, chauffeur, was fined $100 and costs by Mayor John W. Prugh Monday morning. He pleaded guilty.

Larry was arrested at an East End restaurant Saturday night by Patrolmen George Robinson, who found four half-pints of corn whiskey in his possession. Larry was remanded to the County Jail in default of payment of the assessment.

CREDIT GOOD.
After making his final payment of $25 in connection with two old fines, Thomas Stewart, colored, opened up a new charge account at Police Headquarters Monday.

The sum of $58.70 was entered in the books opposite his name, representing a fine of $50 and costs imposed by Mayor Prugh when Stewart pleaded guilty to intoxication, his third or fourth offense.

John Forkner, of near Lebanon, was fined $25 and costs when he pleaded guilty to intoxication. The fine was suspended on condition he leaves the city and does not return.

Stewart and Forkner were arrested Saturday night by Patrolmen Charles Thompson, Ed Craig and George Robinson.

LEGAL PLUNDER

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 5—

The official football as well as the goal posts are legitimate plunder and should go to the victorious football team, it was advocated by student writers here today. The program of the Ohio State-Harvard game bore an editorial condemnation of the athletic associations and sports writers who oppose the idea.

CEDARVILLE COLLEGE BOASTING STRONG GRID SQUAD

Cedarville College's 1927 football team was conceded to be one of the strongest in the school's history. This is not manifest by the record this year but the Yellow Jackets lost six games, four by one touchdown and another by a single point. Two victories were registered over Antioch College, something heretofore never accomplished, while Earlham College was held to a 13 to 1 tie.

Seated: Fisher, Townsley, Stormont, Nagley, Coach Borst, Freed, Brown, Fulton and Thompson.

WILBERFORCE FORFEITS GAME TO HOWARD UNIVERSITY TEAM

Incensed over a referee's decision, Wilberforce University's football team walked off the field in the fourth quarter of its inter-sectional game with Howard University at Washington, D. C., Saturday afternoon and forfeited to the Capital City eleven 1 to 0.

The disputed play came when Howard had scored the only touchdown of the game in the final period and the invading eleven left the field.

No explanation of the incident was obtained by officials at Wilberforce.

EXCUSES NOT TAKEN
NEW YORK.—Traffic judges manage to get at least one good laugh a day from the pleadings of the erring motorists, brought before them. Judge Carlin P. Smith got his when Harold Van Herke, a farmer, arrested for speeding, excused himself on the ground that he was hurrying home to milk the cows because if they are not milked regularly the milk is not of a superior grade. In spite of the novel excuse he was fined $48.

IMPORTANT
In the midst of the mad rush for pleasure and thousands of dollars being burned up that is gone forever, many children are growing up without any good pictures of themselves, which some day will reflect on their parents. You can do no more noble and lasting act than go to Downing's Studio where the very best results can be secured and get photos of the whole family. It is a duty not luxury. Adv.

TREATMENT FOR COLDS
In Saturday's paper I pointed out the importance of diet and other factors in keeping the mucus membranes resistant to disease. Today I want to take up the treatment of colds.

The preliminary symptoms of colds are usually dryness of the nose and dryness and soreness of throat. Often a local treatment with a swab or spray with an antiseptic solution applied two or three times a day, will kill off the germs and abort a cold.

The following formulas are good: Eucalyptus oil, 30 drops; menthol, 10 grains; camphor, 15 grains; liquid petrolatum, 1 ounce. One-fourth iodine and three-fourths glycerine is also a good formula. Gargle or spray the throat often with hot water (and drink a liberal amount, too). A teaspoonful of baking soda and a teaspoonful of salt to the pint of water will make the gargle more effective. Follow this with the oil of glycerine.

This treatment can be continued during the cold if you do not succeed in aborting it. For the nasal treatment, and for the throat also, it is best to get a good atomizer giving a strong, coarse spray.

If you massage actively on the side of the neck under the ears and jaws, with the fingers or with the electric vibrator machine, that will bring the fresh blood to the parts and will send the stagnating blood onward. A hot sweating bath, if you go to bed afterward and do not get up until the morning in the beginning of a cold. A mild cathartic is necessary only if you are constipated. Keep very warm all during a cold, but have fresh air night and day, and take some long, brisk walks.

If you do not succeed in aborting a cold, it will take a definite course. Like other infectious diseases, it is self-limited. Sooner or later the system manufactures a defense which overcomes it. One cold, instead of making one immune, predisposes one to another, so try to get yourself up to par as soon as possible. Unless you are under the care of a physician, internal drugs should not be used.

If a cold is very bad, it is best to stay in bed for a few days. Have a paper bag pinned near to put the cold in, and have those boiled before they are handled again. It is best to use tissue paper and have it burned.

If you are suffering from a cold, and have to take care of a baby, you must wear a mask of several thicknesses of gauze over your nose and mouth when you handle him, and wash your hands thoroughly each time before you touch him or any of his food.

If you should get an acute cold while you are on a reducing diet, so try to go back to normal as soon as possible. It is not necessary to gain more than the two or three pounds which will be caused by water retention. The diet should be an easily-digested one, consisting largely of fruits, vegetables, milk and cereals, omitting the meats, fish and egg-white for a period. Don't over-eat or under-eat.

Chronic colds may become "catarrh." Sometimes this causes infection of the sinuses which cavities in the facial bones which connect with the nose. This inflammation may clear up under ultra-violet ray treatments, or a surgical operation to cause drainage. Better see a nasal specialist for catarrh. (Ozena is a form of dry catarrh with a very offensive odor.) The general treatment is the same as for a cold.

Asthma
In asthma the mucus membranes have usually become sensitized to emanations from different substances, such as animal hair or feathers in mattresses, furs, clothing, or from live animals, such as cats, dogs, rabbits, horses, etc. Sometimes the protein of certain foods — milk, eggs, meat, fish — especially if in excess, may cause asthma.

Fever
Hay fever is due to a sensitization to plant pollens. The same general directions for colds can be followed.

In hay fever and asthma cases made of the offending substance which precipitates the attack are often effective. See your physician about having protein tests made to determine what is acting in your case. No doubt the ultra-violet rays would help.

Meanwhile, test things out for yourself. Stop sleeping on feather pillows, exclude dogs and cats and other animals, maybe even mohair-covered furniture (mohair is goat's hair).

Build up your general health. Tomorrow—Answers to Mothers. NOTE: Please send in stamped, addressed envelope with requests for answers.

CLUBS WILL GATHER
AT O. S. U. CONGRESS
TUESDAY EVENING

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—Members of rural boys' and girls' clubs, in Columbus this week for the annual club congress at the Ohio State University, will attend one of the most unusual banquets ever held here, and will be held November 8, and has been arranged by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation with more than twenty rural organizations supporting the affair.

Much of the food served to the club members will be furnished by farmers' co-operative organizations which are marketing these products.

During afternoon the regular program of the congress will recess and the club members will be taken for a trip around the city by members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and organizations arranging the banquet. Nearly 800 people, including the club members, are expected to gather for the banquet.

The speaking program following the banquet will be short. Invocation is to be given by Rev. Daniel W. Rittenberg. A welcome will be given by Murray D. Lincoln, secretary of the state farm bureau, and a response by W. H. Palmer, state club leader. Frederick A. Miller will give the chief talk, "The Problem of the Youth."

Money Love

"SALLY'S SHOULDERS"

"THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

LILY LEXINGTON is the spoiled and only daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, who have always lived beyond their means. She realizes her highest ambition when she becomes engaged to STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor older than herself. On the day after she promises to marry him she goes downtown to meet her chum, SUE CAIN, and sees a man watching her through the crowd. She feels oddly attracted by him before she sees that he is a taxi driver. She jumps into the cab and asks him to drive her home. On the way she learns that he owns the cab, is "hipped" on automobiles, and is a cab driver to raise money to finance a new kind of piston ring he has invented. Lily takes the identification card, bearing his picture and name, PAT FRANCE, as she gets out. That night he comes for her, and Staley overhears his talk with Lily, and asks her if she's been carrying on a flirtation with a cab driver. Lily indignantly says she hasn't—but she has.

Next day she hunts Pat up and asks him to drive to ANN BARNEY'S for lunch. Ann is a nice, sensible girl, who's in love with Staley, but she takes the news of the engagement stolidly. Lily drives home with Sue and tells her how infatuated she is with an almost unknown man, and next day she points out Pat, on his cab, to Sue, who's horrified at her school-girl infatuation and the shameless way Lily begs Pat to drive her home. However, he refuses to, and then she gave her sharp, wicked, little giggle. He tells her that he is selling the cab to raise money for the piston ring, and she miserably wonders how she'll see him after that. She keeps his card, telling him she has it.

In the meantime Mrs. Lexington plans a big dinner party to announce the engagement, and on the night of it Staley comes to the house early to see Lily alone. He tells her the age-difference between them doesn't matter, and tenderly kisses her. Lily realizes that she hates his love making.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)
CHAPTER VII
"I ought to tell him I don't love him," Lily thought, with Staley's arms around her, holding her close to him. "It's just too late even now—but it will be an hour from now, when all these people that are coming have been told that we're engaged. If I'm going to do anything—I'm going to be honest—I ought to tell him now."

She braced herself to do it, as a swimmer braces himself for a dive into icy waters. And she would have done it then and there, too, except for one of those clever little tricks that Fate sometimes plays on all of us.

It played one now on Lily. The door of the small library at the end of the hall opened, and out walked Mr. Lexington in the dinner jacket and high stiff collar that he hated to wear, as if in good straight down the hall, his face beaming with pleasure all around the cigar he was smoking. He laid one hand on the shoulder of Staley's beautifully tailored coat.

"Well, my boy," he said, heartily, "I feel that stay for us when we welcome you into the family."

Then he laid his other hand on the round, white arm of his daughter and looked at her with pride and love in his eyes. Lily's mother and father were in the room, and when she goes to you," he added, and Lily could see that he meant it.

Then the doorbell rang, and Sue Cain came with Jack Eastman. The evening had begun.

As Lily led Sue upstairs to her room, she felt half dead. It was too late now to do anything. Down in the hall Jack Eastman was slapping Staley on the back and saying something that Lily could not hear, but she knew that he was congratulating Staley.

The trap had sprung. She was in it now—caught.

"Well, I breathe a sigh of relief because you've made up your mind that you want Staley after all," Sue said when she and Lily were together in the big luxurious guestroom upstairs. She took a tiny gold comb from her gold-brocaded evening bag and began to work with her hair before the glass as she talked.

"Far be it from me to advise you to marry a man you don't care about," she went on, nodding at Lily in the glass, "but you've been going around with Staley for such a long time that you must be crazy about him or you couldn't have stood him for so long."

She looked up at Lily, turning her dark little face, with its vivid red lips and eyes that were like two spots of black velvet in its artificial whiteness. But Lily kept perfectly still. No use to say anything now, she kept thinking. The time to say that she wasn't "crazy" about Staley had gone by.

"Besides, there's lots more to marriage than just love!" Sue spoke again. "There's companionship—and Staley is your kind of person. He talks your language, and knows your kind of people. You'll always be great pals. And then there's money—Lily, you're a failure, a joke, and a total loss married to a poor man. To a man like—"

"Oh, let's not talk about it!" Lily broke in quickly. It seemed to her that she couldn't bear to have Sue talk about Pat France that night, or even again. The only thing to do was to forget him—not to speak of him—not to think of him.

But when Sue wanted to talk about anything, she talked about it. It was as impossible to stop her as it is impossible to stop the rain from falling and the morning from coming.

"That certainly was a slick little turn-down you had the other day from that taxi driver," she said, musingly, and then she gave her sharp, wicked, little giggle. "It tickled me to see you get it—after the way most men fall dead at your feet, old kid!"

Still giggling, she started down the stairs, and Lily went down after her, and then she was as cheerful as Daniel did when he descended into the den of lions.

That night Mrs. Lexington had all the things for her dinner party that her husband had told her they could not afford.

She had the new butler to serve the dinner.

She had the banquet cloth of file lace and Italian cut-work that she had paid $500 for.

She had the silver-trimmed cocktail glasses, and tiny silver-trimmed liquor glasses that she had been weeping and pleading for for over two weeks.

She had a centerpiece of white orchids and red orchids, for the addition of the silver-trimmed cocktail glasses, and tiny silver-trimmed liquor glasses that she had been weeping and pleading for for over two weeks.

"Perhaps Sue's right—and money is a big part of married life and happiness," she thought drowsily, her red-gold head pillowed on her arms. "Mother and Dad would have been a lot happier if they'd had more money—that's certain."

And so she went on arguing with herself that maybe she was doing the right thing and the smart thing by marrying Staley Drummond. Well she would be a good wife to him, at any rate—and she would have everything. Everything!

The next day was the second-latest of the month.

"Tomorrow will be the last day Pat drives his cab," thought Lily, sitting at the lunch table with her mother, an hour after she opened her eyes.

On the table before her were the remains of last night's feast. The salmon mayonnaise looked sad and sloppy, with the wilted lettuce around it. The rolls that had hardened over night. The warmed-over potatoes with the cheese hardened around the edge of the baking dish.

It was a most unappetizing meal. But it had to be eaten, for Mrs. Lexington, economized by never wasting a crumb—and if one meal was feast, the next one was practically famine.

But Mrs. Lexington ate her dried-up roll as if it were food for the gods. Before her on the table was the morning paper, and on its "society" page was a large picture of Lily. She read the paragraph beneath it aloud with great gusto:

"Miss Lily Lexington, whose engagement to Mr. Staley Drummond was announced last evening at a dinner given by Miss Lexington's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Merritt Lexington of Montpelier road."

"I wonder if Pat will see it," thought Lily, looking at the picture over her mother's shoulders. Suddenly longing to see him once more swept over her—after tomorrow she would have no more chances to run down town and into his cab and talk to him. Tomorrow would be the last day he would have his cab. And besides, it hurt no one if she simply spent a half hour with him, did it?

"But what if he refuses to let me into the cab the way he did the day I was with Sue," she said to herself, as she dressed in a new pale-gray suit and hobbit's egg blue hat, and pinned some robin's egg blue flowers on her shoulder.

"Well, I'll have to take that chance—that's all." She had to see him!

By splendid stroke of luck his cab stood in Albermarle street. Lily's heart seemed to leap and bound when she saw it, and then to lie very still in her breast.

As she neared it she saw that Pat was talking to a small, plain girl in dark blue, who stood beside the cab, smiling up at him.

"So this is how things are! This is why he treats me like a criminal, a vamp, and a door mat!" said Lily to herself. "He has a girl of his own!" And she felt a sudden scorching jealousy of the plain, small girl.

She walked straight up to the cab and laid her white-gloved hand on the door. "Are you busy, or could you take me for a passenger?" she asked, and from the corner of her eye she saw the small, plain girl in dark blue give Pat a small smile and then turn away into the crowd.

She got into the cab.

Tucked behind the jump seat was a folded newspaper, and Lily saw that part of it had been cut out. It was part of the society page of the morning paper—the part that had had her photograph on it!

The Theater

"Probably the most risqué piece ever put on the American stage," is what John V. A. Weaver has to say of "The Command to Love," starring Mary Nash, writing in "College Humor." The play is put on with a great cast, Weaver goes on to say and there is no leering about the subject, the players "coming right out to say and do things with, all their might."

The lily-pure play is a thing of the past in the opinion of Weaver. "Even Mr. Golden has seen the error of his ways," he says in commenting on "Four Walls." He calls this a drama "which, though not at all dirty, is realistic enough to startle his adherents." "I am glad Mr. Golden has made this change," Weaver continues, "for now he will see that there is almost as much money to be made out of true re-

DANIEL SMITH DIES SUDDENLY AT MOOSE LODGE HALL SUNDAY

Stricken with a sudden attack of heart trouble, from which he has recently suffered, Daniel A. Smith, 66, 223 N. West St., fell dead at the Moose Lodge Hall, W. Main St., about 9:30 o'clock Sunday night.

He had not complained of being ill during the day, but a short time before his death said he felt ill and obtained a drink. He suddenly fell over and the lodge janitor called a physician, who pronounced Mr. Smith dead when he arrived. He had been suffering from heart trouble about two months.

Mr. Smith was born in New Jasper but resided in Xenia several years. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Claretta Smith, two daughters, Mrs. Mason Whittington, W. Third St., and Mrs. Charles Berry, Bellevue, Ky., and one sister, Mrs. Lawrence Hader, Hook Road. Five grandchildren also survive.

He was a member of Trinity M. E. Church, Masonic, Moose, Red Men and D. of P. Lodges.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 o'clock. Friends can call at the home after 6 p. m. Tuesday. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery.

CLEVELAND TO VOTE ON AMENDMENT THAT MAY OUST MANAGER

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 5.—Interests in this year's election here center chiefly on the question as to whether or not local citizens will vote to retain the city manager form of municipal government, which has now been in effect for three years.

Under the present system of government, the councilmen are elected in the customary manner and the council selects a city manager, the municipality's chief executive. The city manager's term of office is indefinite and the power of appointing and releasing him rests on the council.

Harry Davis, former governor and mayor, has initiated an amendment which amounts, practically, to a return to the old system of electing a mayor, by popular vote, for a certain definite term of office. His chief argument is that the voters should have direct voice in selecting the city's highest executive.

Backers of the present form of government, however, that the old system was abandoned because it was found that municipal and public affairs were too much influenced by politics and graft and that the city has been operated on a much more efficient and economical basis in the last three years than it ever was under the old regime.

The issue has become more or less of a personal struggle between Davis and W. R. Hopkins, the present city manager. Two other proposed amendments to the present form of government have been placed on the ballot by Councilmen Harris and Friebohn but these have been almost forgotten and the campaign hinges chiefly on the question as to whether Cleveland voters favor the present form of government or the former system, as offered by the Davis amendment.

PARKED AUTOS MUST SHOW REAR LIGHTS

Police are instituting a campaign to educate motorists in the practice of displaying tail lights or curb lights on their automobiles at night when the machines are parked in the residential districts of the city.

Many accidents will be avoided if this law is obeyed, according to Peter Shagin, motorcycle police man, who explains that the owner of an auto, which is parked without light, is at fault in case of an accident.

It is not absolutely necessary to display lights when autos are parked in the business section at night but police intend to enforce the city ordinance in any case.

PRAYERS LIGHT SHADOWS OF PRISON CELL

Woman Convicted Of Murder Attempt Asks For Forgiveness.

By J. C. JOHNSON
Staff Writer for Central Press and The Xenia Gazette

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 7.—Mrs. Alberdina Frank is waiting for the state supreme court to tell her whether she must serve five years in the penitentiary.

She is the pretty, young wife of Edmund L. Frank, a salesman.

Her desire for constant companionship—companionship denied her because of her husband's frequent absences from the city—is responsible for her plight, she pleaded in court.

A jury has told Mrs. Frank that she is guilty of attempted murder—an attempt to slay her husband. The jury also decided a friend of Mrs. Frank's—Carl B. Davis, erstwhile grocery clerk—was guilty of the same crime.

Each was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Mrs. Frank is free pending an appeal to the higher court.

While waiting for the court to make its decision, Mrs. Frank has turned to prayer for forgiveness and solace. Her prayers are written:

"Each night before I go to bed

I bend my knees, I bow my head,

I say a prayer to Him above

To please enfold me with His love."

It was two years ago when Mrs. Frank became lonely, according to the story told the trial jury. Her husband's travels took him away from home for weeks at a time. She met Davis. Dinner parties, trips to the country, theaters and clandestine meetings followed, according to testimony.

It was not long the jury was told, until Frank's death was plotted. Two men were approached and asked to commit the murder.

"The goal which seems so hard to find, But which is sought by all mankind; I pray that He above, Will help me find this Goal of Love."

Fate plays odd tricks. One of the men approached was a city detective. He reported to his superior officers.

In the meantime, Frank was unaware of the plot. One evening, as Mr. and Mrs. Frank were leaving their fashionable home, Mrs. Frank was arrested—charged with the attempted murder of her husband. Police told Frank of the plot.

A short while later, Davis, was arrested.

"Dear God, please make me worthy Of the prayers I say each night. Lead me not into temptation But set my steps aright."

The trial followed, then conviction. Frank attended every session of the trial.

"I was lonely. I wanted companionship. He was out of town most of the time. That's why..." Mrs. Frank sobbed on the witness stand. She sobbed when the name of her 5-year-old son, Rexford, was mentioned.

She admitted her infidelity.

"Give me the courage and the power To bear my cross alone. Be with me in my darkest hour; Yet, let me suffer and so atone For all my sins to Thee above."

Mrs. Frank was held in jail during her trial. Following conviction, and that of Davis, and pending Mrs. Frank's appeal for a new trial, she was freed on bail.

It is said she and Frank have become reconciled.

"They are living as a couple on their honeymoon," Mrs. Frank's attorney says.

The son, Rexford, is with them.

"Each night before I go to bed,

I bend my knees, I bow my head,

I say a prayer to Him above

To please enfold me with His love."

I bend my knees, I bow my head, Fervently I pray to be forgiven That I may make my life worth living; Not for just myself alone But for the dear ones of my home."

While the court debates, Mrs. Frank writes her prayers. The case probably will not be decided before the April term of the supreme court.

Farm Notes

CARE OF SEED CORN

While early selection of seed corn from the standing stalk is an excellent practice to insure a high percentage of disease-free seed, further attention to drying and storage is equally necessary.

R. C. Thomas, associate plant pathologist, Ohio Experiment Station, finds that prompt drying of the ears after harvesting prevents the possibility of their becoming diseased later and also stops the growth of any seed destroying parasites which already have gained entrance.

Late selected seed, he says, may be expected to have a higher percentage of disease-infested ears. For this reason he recommends drying as quickly as possible without interruption, employing artificial heat if necessary.

It is also very necessary, especially in the case of late selected ears, that some form of germination test be used before planting for the purpose of detecting the weak and diseased ears. Any ears that show a low percentage of germination or weak plants are discarded.

No form of seed treatment has yet been found which will render diseased seed as good as that which is carefully selected, well cared for, and disease free. Although poor seed can be greatly improved by some forms of treatment, no advantage has been shown in the treatment of disease-free seeds.

ROYALTY TO BUILD MODERN HOMES ON SITES OF TENEMENTS

LONDON, Nov. 7.—King George and the Prince of Wales have given an excellent lead to landlords of house properties in great cities.

Both are owners of considerable estates in London which, in places, have fallen into decay and become almost slums, owing to the neglect of sub-landlords. Both, now that the houses are reverting to them under the conditions of leases for a term of years, wish to erect modern buildings instead of the existing dilapidated structures. But both have been met with the difficulty of housing old tenants while re-building takes place.

The difficulty has been met by the erection, on the Prince of Wales' "Duke of Cornwall" estate in South London of the "Old Tenants' House." This has been built particularly for aged women and poor cripples. It suits their needs so well that many will be disin-clined to quit.

Imagine a quiet quadrangle with little houses ranged in two stories with balcony entrances giving complete privacy. In most of these the tenants are Darby and Joan couples paying six shillings ($1.50) per week for two rooms, with lighting free. Other old women are paying one dollar a week for a living room with an aloe bed-room. The tenants have complete freedom of action and are treated as though they were owners of the highest-priced apartments in the city.
